PSRO:
The long arm of Washington lights a short fuse

By ANN O'LEARY

Hardly anyone in America would disagree that medical costs are becoming outlandish. A recent article in Time Magazine reported that U. S. medical costs rose from $42 to $140 billion in a single decade. A major portion of the health care costs in the nation are hospital costs, with the bill for hospital costs from last year totaling an estimated $55.4 billion.

Those paying the bills and those handing them out agree that something must be done to contain the hospital costs. The disagreement lies in what to do about it.

One particular program initiated by the federal government has doctors and administrative personnel at Missouri Delta Community Hospital up in arms.

The controversial program is Professional Standard Review Organizations (PSRO), a system which Harold Jones, administrator at Missouri Delta Community Hospital, says was set up with good intentions. But he, as many of the doctors at the hospital, think the program will fail to improve medical cost problems and regard it as a major step toward socialized medicine.

Dr. Edwin J. Masters of Sikeston says the growing number of government regulations such as the PSROs are "taking all the joy out of the practice of medicine."

The PSRO program was established Oct. 30, 1972 when President Richard Nixon signed the Social Security Act. Attached to the act was an amendment calling for the creation of doctors groups (PSROs) to supervise institutional care provided by Medicare, Medicaid and Maternal and Child Welfare Health programs.

The SeMo PSRO office, located at Cape Girardeau, administers the program in Southeast Missouri and is the smallest of five PSRO offices in the state. It has a 23-man board, with 22 physicians and one hospital administrator currently serving. The SeMo PSRO serves a 20-county area and has 21 hospitals as members.

The PSRO is not a government agency, but a private organization contracted by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to administer the reviews. While some of the review standards are set up within the local PSRO by the board, the PSRO office follows guidelines set up by the HEW and is ultimately responsible to that agency for its operations.

Mike Kepner, director of the SeMo PSRO, asys he sees the PSRO as "a challenge from the government to doctors to discipline themselves." He describes the program as "a grassroots program," with its purpose "to have as good as possible medical care in Southeast Missouri."

Those patients whose care comes under government funds from the above-mentioned programs come to about 52 per cent of the patients seen at Missouri Delta Community Hospital each year, Jones says.

Under the PSRO program, a review coordinator at the hospital monitors the records of the patients involved. The coordinator uses an American Medical Association criteria book and an average length of stay booklet to determine what procedures and treatment are usually adequate for the treatment of the illness involved.

If there appears to be an unusual procedure used to treat the patient, one which is not normally associated with that particular disease, a reviewing physician, a doctor other than the one treating the patient, is called upon to examine the chart. The reviewing physician can contact the treating physician to discuss the reason for the discrepancy in treatment and determine whether it was justified.

Up to a certain point, the review coordinator can grant extensions on the average length of stay. This means that government funds will continue to pay for the patient's care. But after a certain length of time,

East Prairie honors Miss Long

EAST PRAIRIE--Miss Beauton Long, a businesswoman known for her devotion to her customer and family needs beyond the call of duty, was honored Friday night as East Prairie's Citizen of the Year at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet at which the Missouri Scecretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, was the featured speaker.

Miss Beauton, called a "wisp of a woman" bcecause of her petit size, was introduced by Mrs. "Cousin Kay" Benson. A victim of polio while a young woman, she fought back with determination and overcame her handicap to continue her education and become East Prairie's first and only registered pharmacist.

Retiring last year after 38-years of service, she will long be remembered for her many benevolent acts of kindness to her community. It was not unusual to see her walking downtown to her drugstore in the middle of a winter night to fill a prescription for a sick child or adult regardless of their ability to pay. Many of these prescriptions were delivered on foot, her only means of transportation, and often she 'forgot' to fill out a ticket on the sale.

Her life in one way or another has touched most of the people in the area. She has never forgotten her church and it's needs and dedicated students in the R-2 School District have also received a 'helpin hand' many times. Family devotion is another of her strong points.

The "Store with a Woman's Touch" was sold last year to Bill Brewer and a life-long dream of hers was fullfilled when she took a tour of the Holy Land and was baptized in the River Jordan. As Cousin Kay said, "She is the greatest Oak in the forest."

Secretary Kirkpatrick, introduced by Hunt Wellborn, spoke to the group about their need to participate in government and politics, saying, "Every citizen has a stake in government and it's important that people protect that stake."

He spoke of voter apathy, citing that businessmen were just as guilty as any other pgroup, adding that their contributions to government are snormous with corporate income taxes accounting for roughly 14 per cent of revenues collected by all levels of government.

Missouri's wonders, both natural and man-made, were high-lighted by Kirkpatrick, who noted that the state ranks 32nd in the nation in property taxes and 39th in per capita state and local taxes, "one area in which we can be happy being near the bottom." He added that only about 13 cents of the tax dollar goes to the operation of state government.

"We like to think the primary reasons taxes are so low in Missouri is because businessmen realize the important stake they have in state government and work to keep government's costs low so Missouri will remain an attractive state for industrial development," he said.

The amount of federal dollars spent in Mississippi County in 1976 was stressed and according to Kirkpatrick, if federal funds were allocated by population Mississippi County would rank aoout 49th in the state and if the funds were allocated ton the basis of registered voters, the county would be in 63rd place.

Continuing he said government is clearly becoming more expensive, with 22,000 additional government jobs between 1964 and 1974 and a 230 per cent increase in the state payroll during the same decade. The number of state employes is growing three times faster than the number in federal government and "you share part of the responsibility for this massive growth because you are not being watchdogs of public spending," Kirkpatrick said.

Near the close of his address, Kirkpatrick outlined the state government records and archives program his office implemented in 1965, when he took office. This program has eliminated much of the paperwork jungle in state offices and the state records center now provides low cost, bulk storage for more than 149 million records.

"As the result of this records managemnent program, Missouri government is free to operate a little more efficiently and the taxpayers have been saved $5.3 million since 1965. This is one way government has responded to the need for

Plans for boat ramp at Madrid completed

NEW MADRID--Plans and specifications have been completed for the development of public boat ramp facilities at the New Madrid Bend access area on the Mississippi River, according to information received by Robert M. Henrickson, district supervisor of the Missouri Conservation Commission.

Advertising for bids will begin upon receipt of approval for the construction from the U.S. Corps of Engineers. Once construction is started the project could be completed by late summer.

Henrickson said the plans for the boat ramp facilities call for a parking area for 40 cars and boat trailers and an additional area for spectator parking.

The site to be developed is a five-acre tract on the river front just south of Taylor Sand and Gravel.

Due to the continuing growth of boating recreation on the river, public boat ramp facilities have been needed at New Madrid for a long time, Hendrickson said. This new facility will be a great asset to the town, he added.

Breakthrough may alter energy picture

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP) — Scientists at the University of Tennessee's Space Institute say they've achieved a breakthrough in energy technology, burning high sulfur coal to produce pollution-free electricity.

Dr. John Dicks said tests run Friday showed the world's only coal-fired magnetohydrodynamics (MHD) plant can operate on plentiful high-sulfur coat, catching 95 per cent or more of the sulfur without using a costly scrubber. , Dicks said an MHD plant could produce 50 per cent more power from a ton of coal than a conventional plant. And he said the process could be commercially available by 1985 or 1990.

"This could run everything else out of the midterm power production picture," said the director of UTSI' energy conversion division.

UTSI researchers will report their findings at a scientific convention next week at the University of Pittsburgh.

Magnetohydrodynamics is a process discovered by MichaelFaraday in 1831. It has not been considered feasible until recently because of formidible engineering obstacles — like containing combustion temperatures up to 5,000 degrees.

"This is much simpler and more efficient than the conventional plant that burns coal, produces heat, boils water, creates steam and uses it to drive a turbine," said Dicks.

Coal industry figures show the United States has nearly 13.2 billion tons of high-sulfur coal reserves, almost all of it in the Eastern half of the country where 83 per cent of the population lives.

Stolen auto recovered at car dealers

A 1969 Chevelle stolen last week from the used car lot of SeMo Motor Co., 417 N. Main St., has been recovered , according to the Deprartment of Public Safety.

The car was recovered at 11 a.m. Saturday at Dan Taylor Chevrolet, Highway 62 East, where the car had been towed May 8 on deprartment orders.

Public safety officers found the car on May 8 abandoned and blocking Hunter Street. It had a license plate stolen from a car being worked on at SeMo Motor Co.

SeMo Motor Co. officials did not realize the car belonged to them until they discovered it missing from the lot on Friday.

A 21 inch push lawnmower, valued at $50 and a two gallon gasoline can valued at $5 was reported stolen by Albert Fulton, 108 Autumn. Drive. The items were reported stolen sometime between Thursday or Friday from the south end of the car port.

Public safety officers were called at 8 a.m. Saturday to Hardin Grocery Store, 612 W. North St., where someone broke out the front entrance and took three cartons of cigartettes and some snacks.

Officers said the burglar apparently cut himself on the broken glass. Officers were able to lift fingerprints from an adhesive bandage the burglar used to treat himself.

Success!

Louis Jones of Sikeston placed an advertisement in the Daily Standard classified ads to sell a paint sprayer. The next day, the sprayer sold. Jones told the Daily Standard that he sold the sprayer to the third person who called. Jones said he will definitely use the Daily Standard classified ads again.

Woman fined

Diane M. Shaver of Dexter was fined $75 Thursday night in City Court for petit larceny.

Auto accidents seriously hurt 2

Two persons were seriously injured Friday and six teenagers received minor injuries Saturday in three separate accidents on area roads , according to the highway patrol.

A Morehouse woman, Barbara Rae Scott, 32, was seriously injured in an accident at 8:30 p.m. Friday on Route 60, three miles west of Morehouse.

According to the patrol, the woman, a passenger in a car driven east by her husband, Barry Ray Scott, 31, of Morehouse, jumped from the vehicle traveling at 55 miles per hour apparently while the couple was arguing.

She was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital, and he was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

A seven-year-old bicyclist, Dwight Hunt of Oran, suffered serious injuries in an accident at 3:55 p.m. Friday on Route 77, one mile south of Oran.

The accident occurred when the youth riding north turned across the highway into the path of a northbound car driven by Ruth Nellie Finney, 78, of Cape Girardeau.

The boy was taken to Chaffee General Hospital.

A single-vehicle accident accident at 10:05 a.m. Saturday on Route CC, five miles east of Broseley caused minor injuries to six teenagers.

A pickup truck driven west by William Allen Freeman, 16, of Poplar Bluff ran off the left side of the road and overturned.

Freeman and passengers, Bobby Uselton, 13, of Blytheville, Ark., Clifton Luttrell, 16, of Broseley, Doug Redwine, 14, of Poplar Bluff, Bill Moore, 15, of Broseley and Robert Luttrell, 14, of Broseley were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff for treatment of minor injuries.

Today's news in brief

Exam cheating at MU

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — An investigation was reported Saturday to be under way into what was described as possibly widespread cheating on final exams at the Columbia campus of the University of Missouri.

Lynn Jenison, an assistant to the MU vice chancellor for students affairs, said the inquiry now is confined to the college of business administration.

Jenison said there appears to have been widespread use of master finals copies either carelessly misplaced, taken and distributed by authorized persons, or stolen.

Finals have been held over the past week.

OSHA to shed image

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new director of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration says she intends to shed the agency's image as a nitpicker and instead concentrate on hazards that threaten to kill workers at their jobs.

Eula Bingham says her hope is to turn the troubled agency into a partner of industry rather than an adversary. She thinks OSHA's continued survival depends on the success of her efforts.

"I don't want to see it go down the drain until it has had a chance to work," she said in an interview. "That means cutting out the Mickey Mouse and focusing on the truly hazardous situations that make people sick and die."

Ms. Bingham, who prefers that desingation, has taken on one of the toughest jobs in the Carter administration, running an agency that has been criticized by industry and labor since its creation in 1970.

Responsible for alleviating working conditions that each year kill, injure or sicken millions of workers, OSHA's regulations, such as those requiring coat hooks in toilet stalls and advice to farmers that cow manure can be slippery, have made it the butt of numerous jokes.

Employers have charged the agency is a harassment.

Organized labor complains about the agency's slowness in writing standards to protect workers against toxic substances. The Government Accounting Office said in a report that, at OSHA's present rate, "it will take more than a century to establish needed standards for substances already identified as hazards."

Opponents in Congress have chipped away at its authority.

Ms. Bingham acknowledges that many of the complaints are valid.

Eagleton favors voter bill

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D+Mo., said Saturday he is inclined to vote for a Senate bill which would establish election-day voter registration in an attempt to get more voters out.

The bill, passed out of committee to the Senate floor this week, is opposed by the Missouri secretary of state, James Kirkpatrick, who has testified in Washington that it would lead to voter fraud.

Eagleton, in Columbia for University of Missouri graduation ceremonies, told a news conference, "I don't dismiss Kirkpatrick's views lightly, but apparently election-day registration has worked for Wisconsin and Minnesota, and that's the essence of it."

The senator said that election-day registration in those states has resulted in increased voter turnout, which he believes is important for a democracy.

Mental patient convicted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A 27-yearold former mental patient has been convicted of second-degree murder in the killing of Dorothy Sutherland, wife of Ronald R. Sutherland, McDonnell Planetarium director.

A St. Louis Circuit Court jury returned the guilty verdict Friday night against Charles L. Cross, who had been befriended by Sutherland and taken into his home.

Mrs. Sutherland's body was found at the foot of the basement stairs at the home last May 2. She had been stabbed 29 times and her body was covered with black paint.

Sutherland was out of town at the time of the killing.

Robert C. Babione, city public defender who represented Cross, had attempted to convince the jury that Mrs. Sutherland, jealous of her husband's relationship with Cross, had attacked the defendant with the knife and was killed as he defended himself.

Cross testified he remembered throwing a can of paint at the victim, but he said he remembered nothing of the stabbing. Babione said he planned to file a motion for a new trial for Cross.

Gassification plants delayed

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A delay of at least two years was indicated Saturday in a feasibility study required before work can get under way on two projected coal gassification plants in the state.

Robert Simonds, executive director of the Mid+Missouri Council of Governments, said an environmental impact report is necessary to the study because without it federal funding might be jeopardized.

But due to the impact inquiry, Simonds said, there could be a delay in the feasibility statement of about two years.

Also, he added, the study is expected to cost twice as much, about $600,000, because of the environmental impact addition.

The council of governments is an organization of cities in the vicinity of the two plants, expected to cost $260 million each, which would convert Missouri's high sulfur coal into fuel gas by 1982.

Lanier charged with lying

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lee A. Lanier, president of Moneytown, Inc., was found guilty Saturday of three counts of lying to the federal government about a $1 million shortage in food stamp receipts.

The jury acquitted Lanier on two other counts of the charges.

Cabinetmaker accused of spying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andrew Daulton Lee, a 25-year-old cabinetmaker accused of selling U.S. intelligence secrets to the Soviet Union, was convicted Saturday on eight counts of conspiracy and espionage.

After slightly more than a day of deliberations, a federal court jury brought back a guilty verdict that could lead to life imprisonment.

Lee, son of a prominent pathologist, had contended that in passing documents to Soviet agents in Mexico City, he was acting on behalf of the Central Intelligence Agency. Lee claimed that the information he gave the Russians was intended to confuse them.

Lee and his parents, who had attended the entire trial, listened to the verdict in silence.

Lee's co-defendant Christopher Boyce, was convicted April 28 of espionage and conspiracy charges. Boyce, a former clerk at TRW Systems, Inc. in suburban Redondo Beach, was accused of stealing secret documents and codes, passing some to the Soviet embassy in Mexico City and giving others to Lee.

Howver, Boyce claimed that he had been blackmailed by Lee into a life of espionage.

The documents Lee and Boyce were accused of giving the Russians concerned a secret CIA satellite communications system known as the Pyramider Project.

Carter asks 24 nations to join in reappraising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aiming to avert a spread of nuclear-arms, President Carter has invited 24 key nations to help reappraise future development of nuclear energy in all aspects, including waste disposal and fuel supply.

A senior U.S. official, revealing the proposed conference in an interview, said most of the countries — each running a major nuclear program — have reacted positively to the American initiative. They include Communist, neutral and allied states with Brazil, South Africa and France among them.

At least six studies have been listed for the international review.

Joseph S. Nye, deputy to the undersecretary of state for security assistance, science and technology, gave this outline of the six issues:

—The guaranteed security of reactor fuel supplies.

—Assurances that raw uranium ore will be available to countries that need the stuff for their reactors.

—Buildup of international rules and stockpiles to ensure that a uranium user need not rely on a single supplier.

—Setting up international storage facilities for spent nuclear fuel to be kept. This spent fuel can be used in a special reprocessing plant to yield plutonium. But the spent fuel is dangerous to handle and can be highly radioactive for centuries.

—Ways of reusing fuel discharged by the kind of reactors working in this country and sold to 30 or so overseas nations.

—Developing new reactors that will not need plutonium or uranium fuel which also could be diverted for making nuclear bombs.

The U.S. initiative for this projected international program stems from Carter's own moves to revamp America's nuclear energy policies.

Trained as a nuclear engineer himself, the President has seemed to recognize that the spread of nuclear power technology inevitably is accompanied by know-how for nuclear weapons-making.

Nye put the issue in these terms:

"Public opinion is concerned about nuclear wastes, the potential sabotage of nuclear facilities, terrorist theft of nuclear materials, and the risks of nuclear weapon proliferation."

Carter also has sought to shift U.S. nuclear policy. He has suspended commercial production of plutonium. He has urged an end to work on developing the new generation of reactor called the "breeder" which yields more plutonium than it feeds on.

And he has authorized a $750-million study by the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) to discover if there are feasible alternatives to reactors that yield materials that can be swiftly

The Carter administration is fighting an uphill battle.

West Germany, France, Britain and Japan, among others, have committed themselves to some extent to the use of the "breeder" reactor. Their reasoning is that this will free them from the need to rely on American suppliers of dwindling uranium fuel.

Therefore, they have been developing their own chemical processes to transform spent nuclear fuel into pure plutonium.

As more plutonium is produced so grows the risk of its diversion to weapons purposes.

Carter wants to stop that.

A panel of ERDA scientists told him in a special report the other day that trained scientists, with proper facilities, could turn 22 pounds of fissionable material, like plutonium, into a bomb within two weeks.

This has led Nye to say that even the most "technically perfect" system of safeguards "does not solve the central problem of providing timely warning for diplomacy to work" to prevent a country making a nuclear weapon that could endanger world peace.

Carter asks 24 nations to join in reappraising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aiming to avert a spread of nuclear-arms, President Carter has invited 24 key nations to help reappraise future development of nuclear energy in all aspects, including waste disposal and fuel supply.

A senior U.S. official, revealing the proposed conference in an interview, said most of the countries — each running a major nuclear program — have reacted positively to the American initiative. They include Communist, neutral and allied states with Brazil, South Africa and France among them.

At least six studies have been listed for the international review.

Joseph S. Nye, deputy to the undersecretary of state for security assistance, science and technology, gave this outline of the six issues:

—The guaranteed security of reactor fuel supplies.

—Assurances that raw uranium ore will be available to countries that need the stuff for their reactors.

—Buildup of international rules and stockpiles to ensure that a uranium user need not rely on a single supplier.

—Setting up international storage facilities for spent nuclear fuel to be kept. This spent fuel can be used in a special reprocessing plant to yield plutonium. But the spent fuel is dangerous to handle and can be highly radioactive for centuries.

—Ways of reusing fuel discharged by the kind of reactors working in this country and sold to 30 or so overseas nations.

—Developing new reactors that will not need plutonium or uranium fuel which also could be diverted for making nuclear bombs.

The U.S. initiative for this projected international program stems from Carter's own moves to revamp America's nuclear energy policies.

Trained as a nuclear engineer himself, the President has seemed to recognize that the spread of nuclear power technology inevitably is accompanied by know-how for nuclear weapons-making.

Nye put the issue in these terms:

"Public opinion is concerned about nuclear wastes, the potential sabotage of nuclear facilities, terrorist theft of nuclear materials, and the risks of nuclear weapon proliferation."

Carter also has sought to shift U.S. nuclear policy. He has suspended commercial production of plutonium. He has urged an end to work on developing the new generation of reactor called the "breeder" which yields more plutonium than it feeds on.

And he has authorized a $750-million study by the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) to discover if there are feasible alternatives to reactors that yield materials that can be swiftly

The Carter administration is fighting an uphill battle.

West Germany, France, Britain and Japan, among others, have committed themselves to some extent to the use of the "breeder" reactor. Their reasoning is that this will free them from the need to rely on American suppliers of dwindling uranium fuel.

Therefore, they have been developing their own chemical processes to transform spent nuclear fuel into pure plutonium.

As more plutonium is produced so grows the risk of its diversion to weapons purposes.

Carter wants to stop that.

A panel of ERDA scientists told him in a special report the other day that trained scientists, with proper facilities, could turn 22 pounds of fissionable material, like plutonium, into a bomb within two weeks.

This has led Nye to say that even the most "technically perfect" system of safeguards "does not solve the central problem of providing timely warning for diplomacy to work" to prevent a country making a nuclear weapon that could endanger world peace.

Strawberries 'fair' this year

BLOOMFIELD— Strawberries this year are fair, but need a rain, Mrs. Jerry Holland said, weighing some of the fruit at her stand about seven miles west of Bloomfield on Route J.

She and her husband grow about three acres of the berries and sell them on a "pick-your-own" basis or already picked. They started picking the berries about two weeks ago.

Normally strawberries are picked for a three-week period, but it has been so dry that she doesn't know if they can pick a third week.

Last year about this time the berry picking was already over. Picking started in April and a late frost killed off the first of the crop.

Strawberry festivals are traditionally held in the middle of May, Mrs. Holland observed, but in recent years the berries have been getting riper much earlier.

A number of people have come to the patch to pick berries, several from as far away as Sikeston. A bystander told a photographer ready to take a picture one late afternoon: "You should have been here this morning, must have been about 40 people out there picking."

Mrs. Holland usually works at Missouri Utilities company in Dexter and is using her vacation time to work at the stand selling berries.

She is quick to point out that machines cannot fill the needs in caring for a patch, and that the work like hoeing is still done by hand.

"My daughter likes to go out there in her bikini," Mrs. Holland said, "but motorists passing by distract her and she doesn't get much work done."

"It's her own fault," a bystander said, "she shouldn't be so pretty."

Stolen truck is recovered

DEXTER— Police Thursday recovered a truck stolen Monday in Sikeston owned by Ronald Dean.

The truck was discovered by police behind the Hickory House Motel about 2 p.m. Thursday.

Bill would preserve Oregon trail

DENVER (AP) — A bill to preserve and provide access to the Oregon trail has been introduced in congress by Rep. Jim Johnson, R-Colo.

The bill would establish a continuous travelway along public roads and highways most closely following the historic route. Visible signs of pioneer travel, including grave and camp sites, would be preserved, a release from Johnson's Washington office said.

The Oregon Trail would become the third component of the National Trails System along with the Appalachian and Pacific Crest Trails, the release said. The system was created by congress in 1968.

A special category under the system known as National Historic Trails would be established by the bill, according to the release.

Johnson said legislation is needed to coordinate local preservation efforts. The bill would make the Secretary of Interior in conjunction with an advisory committee responsible for this coordination.

The 1,900 mile trail is the wagon route used for westward migration inthe 1800s. The route passes through the states of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Dexter hospital sets open house

DEXTER— Demonstrations and displays will highlight the National Hospital Week Open House Sunday at Dexter Memorial Hospital.

The Open House is from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, with members of the hospital auxiliary serving as tour guides at 15-minute intervals.

A free blood pressure check station will also be set through the afternoon.

Demonstrations on tap include a simulated "operation" in the hospital operating room, nurses and hospital employes demonstrating x-ray, respirators and other pieces of equipment. Also, employes will be taking "stress tests," and will be available to answer questions from those touring the facility.

Hospital Administrator Jack Norman has urged everyone to tour the hospital, pointing out that the tour should be informative and interesting.

Refreshments will be available at the end of the tour, Norman said.

Teasdale to fill two Public Service Commission posts

JEFFERSON CITY — The May resignation of Public Service Commissioner A. Robert Pierce, Jr., and the expiration of Commissioner Charles Fain's term this month will give Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale his long-awaited chance to appoint his own people to the Public Service Commission.

Teasdale's two appointees and Commission Chairman James Mulvaney, the only commissioner Teasdale has supported, will give the governor a majority on the commission.

Mulvaney would not speculate whether the changeover in commissioners would affect commission policy. But the two remaining commissioners, both appointed by former Gov. Christopher Bond and opposed by Teasdale, doubt whether significant change in the commission's policy and rate decisions will result.

"The economic facts have a lot more to do with rates than commission appointments," commissioner Hugh Sprague said. "If the new commissioners use their independent judgment, as they are required to do by law, I don't think anything will change," he said.

Commissioner Stephen Jones also has doubts about any dramatic upheaval within the commission.

Jones says that all commission decisions must fall within "a certain band of reasonableness."

"The appointees may line up on the lower end of the band," he says, "but the difference in the rates involved does not amount to much."

Although Mulvaney has taken a wait-and-see attitude, he acknowledged the commission has already gone through a lot of change in the last couple of years.

Teasdale has no reaction to Pierce's resignation, said Dale Amick, Teasdale's press secretary. The governor will first concentrate on finding a replacement for Fain before replacing Pierce, he says.

In his resignation letter to Teasdale, Pierce said, "I have enjoyed my opportunity to serve over the past three and one-half years, but personal considerations suggest that I step down at this time."

Pierce, who was commission chairman from April 1975 to January 1977, called his term on the commission "interesting and challenging" and said in spite of his confrontations with the governor, he was sorry to leave.

In February Pierce challenged Teasdale to substantiate his charges against the commission or apologize. After receiving no response from the governor, Pierce called a press conference and rebutted some of Teasdale's charges.

Looking back on his confrontation with the governor, Pierce said he thought his actions helped restore the public's confidence in the commission.

"It was something that had to be done for the stability of Missouri's utility regulation and energy supply," he said.

Pierce said the major changes he has seen in the utility situation during his term have been the utilities becoming more interested in their rate design and in their customer relationships.

The old and the new

Members of the Sikeston Community Sheltered Workshop are eager to move into their new facility, 515 North West St. Although there is still some work to be completed, B. W. Gunn, manager, says moving will begin next week. The old facility located in the Airport school is much smaller than the new building, which was built at an estimated cost of $500,000.

Estimated budget approved

SCOTT CITY — The Illmo-Scott City R-1 Board of Education Monday night voted to retain its sick leave policy, approved an estimated school budget and voted to buy a new bus.

The board voted to keep the present sick leave policy of seven days per year to accumulate to 42 days as it is now.

On the recommendation of the rights and responsibility committee of the Community Teachers Association, the board voted to pay retiring teachers, at the time of retirement, the amount of the current substitute salary for each accumulated sick leave day.

Linda Simpkins was hired as lunchroom cook for next school year to replace retiring Lorean Knupp. All other present cooks and supervisor were rehired for next school year, as were all bus drivers, custodians, secretaries, and teacher aides now in the system.

The estimated school budget, including revisions was discussed and approved for next year. The budget will be finalized after July 1, when the tax rate is certified to the county clerk. A board meeting will be scheduled sometime after July 1, at a date to be announced, to review the budget. At that time, the accurate community may attend the review of the budget.

The superintendent discussed with the board the state tax assessements in Scott County and pending legislation of same. Also discussed was House Bill 131 in the state legislature, relative to changing the State Foundation School Program. A comparison was made between the present Foundation Program formula and the pending new formula.

The state foundation program is the formula used by the state to distribute state money to the various schools. The Illmo—Scott City school would benefit more in future years with the new formula, if passed.

A new school bus was authorized to be purchased for next year from Ponder Equipment Co. in Charleston. The new bus will replace a 1968 model bus. Other chassis bidders were Brenencke Cheverolet of Jackson, Cape GMC and Ford Groves of Cape Girardeau. Other body bidders were Superior Body and Wayne Body from St. Louis.

The board approved school participation in federal programs for next school year.

The board discussed the possibility of providing a gas pump at the school to furnish gas for buses for next year. The discussion was tabled until a future meeting.

Bonds paid off by the school last year were destroyed by the board.

The superintendent gave a report to the board concerning the use of the schools standby heating system during the past year. This system was used more this past winter than ever before. The cost in extremely cold weather is approximately $300 per 24-hour period.

Dolores Richards, an elementary teacher, was granted a leave of absence for one year. Susan Hancock and Rick McDonald were granted, upon their request, a release from their contract for next year. Marilyn Kingree and Lynne Taylor were hired as teachers for next year in the elementary level.

Rose Tallent was employed for one year to replace Dolores Richards, while she is on a year's leave of absence; Kenneth Keirsey and James R. Waltrip were employed as high school teachers for next year; and Tom Anderson of Benton has accepted a contract as assistant principal in the high school for next year.

The board gave approval for A-team cheerleaders to attend a cheerleaders clinic at Jonesboro,Ark., in June, or another one of their choice. The board left the decision of majorettes attending a clinic up to the band teacher.

Badly burned girl dies despite skin graft

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Kathy Thornrose, a badly burned 6-year-old for whom doctors planned to "buy time" with a skin graft from a dead person, died Tuesday night in Norfolk General Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said the Virginia Beach girl died about 10 p.m., less than 24 hours after skin from a dead woman had been obtained to graft onto burned portions of her body.

Kathy was burned March 24 over 45 per cent of her body when her clothing caught fire as she played with a cigarette lighter. Her body had rejected grafts from her own unaffected skin, and several skin banks across the country were unable to meet her needs.

Dr. Willcox Ruffin Jr., who was treating her, made a plea Monday for donations of skin from a dead person to use for the grafts.

More than 200 persons telephoned the hospital Tuesday to offer their own skin, but live donors were turned down because of risk to themselves.

The family of a woman about 60 years old, who died Monday night of a heart ailment, had donated her skin for Kathy's use. A hospital spokesman said Ruffin had removed the skin at the hospital.

The graft had been planned for next week, when Kathy's condition was expected to be improved. It was intended to "buy time" for the child until her own unaffected skin could be used for permanent grafts, Ruffin said.

Sikeston woman hurt

Linda Foote, 25, of Sikeston received minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 2:30 a.m. Friday on an unmarked county road .2 miles north of Highway 62 in Scott County.

The highway patrol reported the accident occurred when a southbound van driven by the Foote woman ran off the road on a curve and struck a bridge railing.

Auto, barbells and gasoline reported stolen

An automobile, a set of barbells and 25 gallons of gasoline have been reported stolen, the Public Safety Department said Friday

A 1969 Chevelle was stolen sometime between Monday and Thursday morning from the used car lot at SeMo Motor Co., 417 N. Main St.

The car was parked on the back side of the lot on the west side of the building.

A set of barbells worth $10 was traken from the east side of the Jasper F. Carey home, 847 Matthews Ave., between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 3:20 p.m. Thursday.

Shirley Jean Mays, 917 Lora St., told officers 25 gallons of gasoline were siphoned from her car between 11:30 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Friday while the car was parked at her home. The gasoline was valued at $13.

New workshop facility is about ready for occupancy

"A lot of work" remains to be finished on the new Community Sheltered Workshop facility at 515 North West St., but manager B. W. Gunn says the workshop will probably begin moving next week.

The Sheltered Workshop is currently housed in a frame structure in the Airport school. The new building, measuring 22,000 square feet, will provide three offices, a lunch room, conference room, six workroom areas and a 15,000 squre foot open shop area. Construction cost of the building, an estimated $500,000, is financed by a one-mill tax approved by Scott County voters in April of 1975.

The Community Sheltered Workshop employes 100 area residents who are mentally retarded and-or handicapped. The workshop program was founded six years ago and serves Scott, New Madrid and Mississippi counties.s

Area industries currently having work done at the Sheltered Workshop include National Lock, Medalist, IXL of Bernie, Todd Laundry, Triangle and SeMo Box Co. of Chaffee.

The new building should be ready for occupancy by mid-June, Gunn said. Designer of the building is the firm of Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes.

Family Services pays $111,075

EAST PRAIRIE— Expenditures by the Divison of Family Services in Mississippi County for April totaled $111,075, according to figures released by Mrs. Agnes Cunningham, county director.

Aid to dependent children in 772 cases and including 1,775 children totaled $104,443. General relief in 92 cases amounted to $6,035 and five aid to the blind and blind pension cases received assistance of $597.

Mississippi County has 574 supplemtntal security income and Missouri supplemental cases with total expenditures of $17,002. There are 318 supplemental security income only cases for which medical benefits and social services are provided.

There are 285 persons receiving medical assistance only and the county has 118 recipients in professional nursing homes.

The old and the new

Members of the Sikeston Community Sheltered Workshop are eager to move into their new facility, 515 North West St. Although there is still some work to be completed, B. W. Gunn, manager, says moving will begin next week. The old facility located in the Airport school is much smaller than the new building, which was built at an estimated cost of $500,000.

Estimated budget approved

SCOTT CITY — The Illmo-Scott City R-1 Board of Education Monday night voted to retain its sick leave policy, approved an estimated school budget and voted to buy a new bus.

The board voted to keep the present sick leave policy of seven days per year to accumulate to 42 days as it is now.

On the recommendation of the rights and responsibility committee of the Community Teachers Association, the board voted to pay retiring teachers, at the time of retirement, the amount of the current substitute salary for each accumulated sick leave day.

Linda Simpkins was hired as lunchroom cook for next school year to replace retiring Lorean Knupp. All other present cooks and supervisor were rehired for next school year, as were all bus drivers, custodians, secretaries, and teacher aides now in the system.

The estimated school budget, including revisions was discussed and approved for next year. The budget will be finalized after July 1, when the tax rate is certified to the county clerk. A board meeting will be scheduled sometime after July 1, at a date to be announced, to review the budget. At that time, the accurate community may attend the review of the budget.

The superintendent discussed with the board the state tax assessements in Scott County and pending legislation of same. Also discussed was House Bill 131 in the state legislature, relative to changing the State Foundation School Program. A comparison was made between the present Foundation Program formula and the pending new formula.

The state foundation program is the formula used by the state to distribute state money to the various schools. The Illmo—Scott City school would benefit more in future years with the new formula, if passed.

A new school bus was authorized to be purchased for next year from Ponder Equipment Co. in Charleston. The new bus will replace a 1968 model bus. Other chassis bidders were Brenencke Cheverolet of Jackson, Cape GMC and Ford Groves of Cape Girardeau. Other body bidders were Superior Body and Wayne Body from St. Louis.

The board approved school participation in federal programs for next school year.

The board discussed the possibility of providing a gas pump at the school to furnish gas for buses for next year. The discussion was tabled until a future meeting.

Bonds paid off by the school last year were destroyed by the board.

The superintendent gave a report to the board concerning the use of the schools standby heating system during the past year. This system was used more this past winter than ever before. The cost in extremely cold weather is approximately $300 per 24-hour period.

Dolores Richards, an elementary teacher, was granted a leave of absence for one year. Susan Hancock and Rick McDonald were granted, upon their request, a release from their contract for next year. Marilyn Kingree and Lynne Taylor were hired as teachers for next year in the elementary level.

Rose Tallent was employed for one year to replace Dolores Richards, while she is on a year's leave of absence; Kenneth Keirsey and James R. Waltrip were employed as high school teachers for next year; and Tom Anderson of Benton has accepted a contract as assistant principal in the high school for next year.

The board gave approval for A-team cheerleaders to attend a cheerleaders clinic at Jonesboro, Ark., in June, or another one of their choice. The board left the decision of majorettes attending a clinic up to the band teacher.

Badly burned girl dies despite skin graft

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Kathy Thornrose, a badly burned 6-year-old for whom doctors planned to "buy time" with a skin graft from a dead person, died Tuesday night in Norfolk General Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said the Virginia Beach girl died about 10 p.m., less than 24 hours after skin from a dead woman had been obtained to graft onto burned portions of her body.

Kathy was burned March 24 over 45 per cent of her body when her clothing caught fire as she played with a cigarette lighter. Her body had rejected grafts from her own unaffected skin, and several skin banks across the country were unable to meet her needs.

The King and his Court will be in Southeast Missouri next Thursday night at Oran, starting at 8:30 p.m. The King challenges local players, then takes his 4—man team on the field and usually wins. All—Stars from the Semo Fastpitach Softball League will oppose the talented troupe.

Royals' Colborn throws no-hitter against Texas

Colborn struck out six batters, including Bump Wills three times, and walked only one.

The defense came to his aid with several outstanding plays, particularly in the late innings.

In the eighth, Tom Grieve hit a slicing line drive into center that brought the crowd of 29,978 to its feet, but Cowens snared the ball in the webbing of his glove.

Colborn's no-hitter was the first since San Francisco's John Montefusco turned the trick against the Atlanta Braves Sept. 29, 1976.

Colborn, 5-3, who entered the game with an earned run average of 2.61, tops among Kansas City starters, retired the first 14 batters before a breaking pitch in the fifth brushed Toby Harrah, sending him to first base as the first Ranger runner.

Colborn did not allow a base on balls until Jim Sundberg walked leading off the sixth. A double play ball off the bat of Juan Beniquez quickly rubbed out the runner.

The Royals mounted a 2-0 lead in the third, scored two more runs in the sixth and wrapped it up with two more in the eighth.

Colborn, 30, broke into the major leagues with the Chicago Cubs in 1969, posting a 1-0 record in six games. He appeared in 34 games in the 1970 season, primarily as a reliever, and spent part of the 1971 season with the Cubs.

In 1972, he joined Milwaukee as a reliever, but by mid-season had become the Brewers' top starter. The next season, Colborn posted a 20-12 record and was named to the American League All-Star team.

He was traded to the Royals along with catcher Darrell Porter in a deal that sent infielder Jamie Quirk, pitcher Bob McClure and outfielder Jim Wohlford to Milwaukee.

Prior to Saturday, Colborn's finest game came on May 9, 1973, when he hurled a one-hitter against the Rangers—the lone hit being a home run by Jeff Burroughs.

Cards take pair from Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Garry Templeton, Jerry Mumphrey, Ken Reitz and Keith Henandez belted home runs Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals edged the Atlanta Braves 7-6.

The Cards pounded a trio of Braves' pitchers for 14 hits in winning their third game in a row. Clay Carroll, 2-0, was the winner in relief of starter Pete Falcone.

St. Louis took a 5-4 lead in the fifth off Braves' starter and loser Buzz Capra, 0-4, when Mumphrey and Reitz clouted consecutive homers. The Cards added to their margin in the eighth when Mike Tyson singled, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Lou Brock's double.

Hernandez crashed his sixth homer of the year for the final St. Louis run.

Atlanta took a 4-3 lead in the third when Jerry Royster singled, moved to third on Junior Moore's single and continued home when Mumphrey's throw to first was wide and forced catcher Ted Simmons away from the plate. Moore moved up on a walk and Gary Matthews' deep fly to right and scored on Vic Correll's single.

Blues broke?

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The owners of the St. Louis Blues reportedly will file for bankruptcy on behalf of the National Hockey League franchise within the next few weeks, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said.

Sidney Salomon Jr. and Sid Salomon III, both in poor health, have been trying to sell the financially-troubled team and have indicated they would not be involved in hockey for the 1977-78 season.

But because of unfavorable mortgage conditions on the Arena and St. Louis's 5½-per cent amusement tax, the Blues so far have been unable to close a deal with prospective buyers, the Post-Dispatch said.

If no buyer has been found by the conclusion of the NHL's annual meeting in Montreal June 8, the Blues likely would be dissolved with a player dispersal draft then held in advance of the June 14 amateur draft, the newspaper said.

Two other NHL teams reported to be in financial trouble, the Atlanta Flames and the Colorado Rockies, would then be likely candidates to shift to St. Louis, according to the Post-Dispatch.

Rockets on the brink of elimination

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Houston Rockets, within one game of elimination from the National Basketball Association semifinals, admit arithmetic is an even stronger opponent than the Philadelphia 76ers.

"Mathematically, you've got to say it's almost impossible," Coach Tom Nissalke said of his Rockets' chances of winning the best-of-seven series. "You'd have to be an idiot to say otherwise. Are we in a hole? I'd have to say, yes, we are in a very big hole."

The fifth game of the series is set for Sunday in Philadelphia. If a sixth game is needed, it will be in Houston next Tuesday night.

The 76ers roared back from last Wednesday night's 118-94 loss to smear Houston 107-95 Friday night, deflating the Rockets' dreams. "I felt if we won this game we could win the series," Nissalke said. "I'm not saying we can't. Obviously, we can still win the series.

"But just as obviously, we'd be in much better shape coming off tonight 2-and-2," he said after Friday night's game. "If we could have won, I think we could have won the series and I think we could have beaten Portland in the finals."

After watching Houston star Moses Malone rack up 30 points and 25 rebounds in the third game of the series, Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue moved Caldwell Jones to cover the Rockets' center. Jones held the Houston superstar to five points and 13 rebounds.

"The most important thing was the job Caldwell did on Moses," Shue said. "He was steady all the way. He played the entire second half. As a team, defensively, we were steady. We didn't have too many breakdowns and most of the shots came from the outside."

"Our job is to give them just one shot and then get the rebound," Jones said. "That's our whole game, to get the ball and kick it out. We didn't do that Wednesday night but we did tonight. (Friday)."

Jones had only six points and 11 rebounds for the game, but he said he didn't play for personal recognition.

"I don't get any personal satisfaction out of seeing my name in the paper," Jones said. "I'm not egotistical and I don't mind being in the shadows. Everybody on this team has a role on this team and I know what mine is."

Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is one of the brightest new stars in major league baseball. Parker, 6-5 and 220 pounds, can run 100 yards in less than ten seconds, is hitting over .400 and averaging more than one rbi per game while the Pirates have gone 20-9.

Second IN COMMAND

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard Sportswriter

Bright and early Monday morning Charlie Francis will rejoin us, fresh and ready for work after a week-plus of vacation. Yes, the head sports honcho at this paper has enjoyed the pleasures of your basic annual vacation in eastern America for the last nine days and yours truly has had to take over the reins. (Compliments for the fantastic job can be called in to phone number BR-549.)

Next week the Sikeston Saints get their Bi-State season underway, with a Wednesday game at Cape and a Sunday game at home against the Perryville Stars. Several ballplayers from both Cape and Sikeston are playing for the Southeast Missouri State Indians, but there still should be enough quality players around to make for an interesting contest. The game starts at 8 p.m.

The Capahas, 1976 League champions, are expected to start righthander Clay Vangilder. Glen Alexander, Ricky Taylor, Mike Brasher and Sammy Taylor are all in the running for the Sikeston starting assignment. The first two listed hurlers are lefties.

Two big voids must be filled in the Sain lineup, at first and in the outfield. Shortstop Grant Dambach is going into business in St. Louis and outfielder-DH Stan Hall has moved to Imperial, California. Both players had outstanding talent but, like Tony Perez and the Cincinnati Reds, their personalities will be mised even more.

With two of last year's .300 hitters missing because of the SeMo team's playoff activity (Rick Eisenbach and Bill Schatzley), the lineup is still a bit undecided. At no time have the Saints had their complete squad on their field during a practice session. David Shell will start at catcher for Sikeston, with Jim Saulter (.279) or David McClarty (.211) at first. Second base will be manned by hard-hitting Sammy Taylor and Bruce Lawrence (.250) will probably start at short. Mike Brasher (.364) will play third and outfielders will be picked from Mitch Walker, Donnie Taylor, Ricky Taylor and Gary Blaylock. Blaylock and either McClarty or Saulter are the top choices as the team's designated-hitter in the first few games.

Jeff Jackson will start against Perryville.

That was some kind of fantastic comeback for the SeMo State Indians. I'm talking about winning 14 of 15 league games after dropping the first three, and overhauling Maryville on the final weekend of the season to win the title by nine percentage points. Two different times lefty Trae Hastings was named pitcher of the week and, on the season's final weekend, Grant Dambach was named hitting star for the week.

It is a tribute to the teamwork of the Indians when you consider that they didn't have a hitter in tthe top five (Hastings and Steve Hosick were sixth and seventh in ERA).

The only league-leading figure provided by the Indians was 78 strikeouts by Hastings.

The Vanduser softball team accomplished what many thought was near impossible in this area by beating Oran and their ace Johnny Watkins Friday night 5-2. Basil Mays doubled and was driven in by Harold Graviett in the fourth. Mays carried the third, and winning run across the plate.

David Shell ran to four the list of 1977 SHS grads who will be attending ASU this fall on athletic scholarships. Others joining him will be football players Hal Butler, James Wilder and Paul Gilbow.

We'd like to wish all these young men good luck while pursuing their collegiate careers.

The doubles team of Chris Matthews and David Potashnick should also be congratulated for their recent district tennis championship, earning them a trip to Columbia for state competition. That's the first time Sikeston's had a male entry in state competition in several years. Lynn Bizzell, of course, represented the girls' team last fall.

200-plus speeds mark Indy trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Sneva, who bounced back from a harrowing, fiery crash here two years ago, shattered the 200-mile-an-hour barrier at venerable Indianapolis Motor Speedway Saturday with a clocking of 200.535 m.p.h. during pole-position qualifying for the May 29 Indy 500.

Sneva, a 28-year-old former junior high school principal from Spokane, Wash., also posted a track record of 198.884 m.p.h. over his four-lap qualifying run.

Sneva, who was held back from breaking the 200 m.p.h. in practice the past week because of a blown motor and then a brush with the wall, had a first lap of 200.401, then bettered it before dropping off to the 197 bracket the final two laps.

"The first two laps I knew were good and I just wanted to get two more. The car got a little loose and I felt there was no sense in taking chances," Sneva said.

"We've got to be pleased. We had a tough week. The guys (his crew) did a fantastic job getting the car ready. We didn't get too many practice laps."

Track observers said Sneva dusted the wall coming out of the first turn after his fastest circuit.

The speeds for Sneva and his McLaren-Cosworth were far and away the fastest of a surprising slow day of qualifying. A.J. Foyt completed a run at 193.465. Al Unser averaged 195.950.

Still to be heard from, however, were defending champion Johnny Rutherford, national champion Gordon Johncock and Grand Prix star Mario Andretti.

Rutherford, Andretti, Foyt and Johncock were all members of the "unofficial" 200 club. Rutherford did it Thursday in practice with a speed of 200.624 m.p.h. Andretti and Foyt topped 200 the previous day. Johncock did it in tire tests last March.

Foyt, the very first qualifier for the 1977 race, said: "The track was very slippery. And the front end was pushing so bad it killed our speeds. This is the slowest we've run all month."

The day was an reasonably good one, better than the hot, sticky 80-degree temperatures forecast. Thin, high clouds moved into the area during the early morning hours and kept the temperature, both in the air and on the track surface, down considerably.

The possibility of seeing the 200 barrier fall lured a huge crowd to the 270,000-seat facility. Estimates ranged from 200,000-250,000 in attendance Saturday.

Blazers see what they were missing

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Elated veteran Portland guard Larry Steele says he now sees what the Trail Blazers had been missing in the National Basketball Association.

"It's been a long time, but it's all paid off," Steele said after the Trail Blazers swept four games from the Los Angeles Lakers to advance to the NBA championship.

Portland, which had never had a winning season, stopped the Lakers 105-101 Friday night for the NBA Western Conference crown.

"It's like growing up poor or doing without certain things," said Steele, who in his sixth season has worn a Portland uniform longer than anyone else on the roster. "Now that I'm here, I see what we were missing in all those years."

Portland will meet the winner of the Houston-Philadelphia semifinal series for the championship.

Trail Blazer Coach Jack Ramsay, savoring Friday's victory in his first season with Portland, said he did not care which team his squad faces but the players probably want to challenge Philadelphia.

"I think the players would prefer to play Philadelphia because it is the supposed wonder team," Ramsay said.

"I felt all along we had the potential to play for a championship," said Ramsay. "I thought we would do it if we kept our game on the proper pitch."

Rookie guard Johnny Davis, who played a key role in Portland's fourth-game triumph, said, "It feels good to win the series, but now we have to sustain the mental toughness until our objective is obtained. That's to win the championship."

Davis, 23, who replaced injured Dave Twardzik as a starter five games earlier, finished the night with 21 points, second only to Maurice Lucas' team-high 26.

Lucas, a Portland newcomer this season from Louisville of the defunct American Basketball Association, scored 18 points in the second half, halting a Los Angeles rally that had given the Lakers a six-point edge in the third period.

Davis stole the ball from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and scored on a layup to build a 103-93 Portland edge that was never headed.

Abdul-Jabbar captured game scoring honors with 30 points and snared 17 rebounds.

Lucas lauded Abdul-Jabbar and the other Lakers: "That team is built around Jabbar and Jabbar is too proud, much too proud, to give up. He never bows his head."

Laker Don Chaney, who played on two NBA championship teams with the Boston Celtics, said, "Portland resembles the old Celtic teams. They hustle and play good defense."

Of a possible Portland-Philadelphia series, Los Angeles Coach Jerry West said, "Philadelphia's guards won't have the trouble with Portland's quickness that we had."

"Portland is a a great team," West said. "It has as fine personnel as there is in basketball. There is great depth in the backcourt. It is a team that is going to be good for a long time."

'Miracle' par saves Schroeder lead

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — John Schroeder salvaged a miracle par-four on the final hole and held onto a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

Schroeder, a four-stroke leader when play began on the humid day, was only one shot in front of threatening Ben Crenshaw and thrashing around under bridges on the wrong hole, worrying about scoreboards that were in his way and chopping up the 18th hole in Sunday duffer fashion when the national television coverage ended.

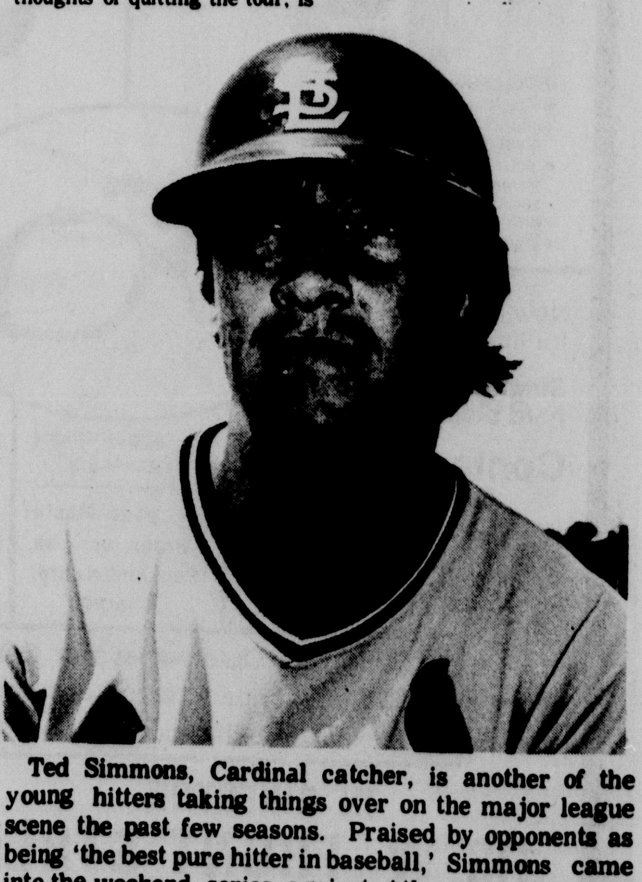
He had to make par four—which appeared all but impossible—to retain his lead.

And he made it, hitting his third shot—after taking a drop—to within 10 feet of the flag and dropping the putt that let him complete a round of one-over-par 71 and 54 holes with a 202 total.

"A helluva four," said Crenshaw, who watched the proceedings from the press room.

Crenshaw, four strokes back with three holes to play, closed to within one on Schroeder's struggles over the last three holes and a 15-foot birdie putt of his own on the 18th hole. He shot a 68 for 203, seven under par on the 7,190-yard Colonial Country Club course.

Schroeder, 31 and a longshot who has played so poorly in recent years he's entertained thoughts of quitting the tour, is the son of former Wimbledon champion Ted Schroeder.



Ted Simmons, Cardinal catcher, is another of the young hitters taking things over on the major league scene the past few seasons. Praised by opponents as being 'the best pure hitter in baseball,' Simmons came into the weekend series against Atlanta with a .394 batting average. His exploits this year have earned him a cover story in the most recent issue of 'Bible of Baseball', the Sporting News.

Martin's mouth nets big fine

ANAHEIM (AP) — New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin, once again embroiled in a front-office dispute, is an estmated $2,500 lighter and still doesn't have a third-string catcher.

The fiery Martin, believed to be the first manager ever fined by his own club, was blasted by Yankee President Gabe Paul Friday in a press release issued in New York over Martin's remarks concerning the lack of a 25th player.

Later, word leaked that Martin also had been fined $2,500, although neither Paul nor club owner George Steinbrenner III would confirm it. Martin admitted he had been fined, but had no further comment.

Martin, upset over playing several games one man below the 25-player limit, had criticized Yankee management for delaying his requested recall of catcher Elrod Hendricks after the club lost a game Wednesday night at Seattle. The Yankees also lost to the expansion Mariners Thursday night. Martin insisted he could have used Hendricks, a left-handed batter.

Outfielder Reggie Jackson, who signed a $2.9-million contract with the Yankees this year, volunteered to pay Martin's fine after New York beat California 3-0 Friday night. But Martin said, "I'll pay it myself."

"The decision on the 25th player was delayed pending disposition of various negotiations with other clubs and examination of the players at Syracuse, " said Paul. "Certain comments directed at Mr. Steinbrenner by Martin concerning his (Steinbrenner's) alleged failure to add a 25th player are totally inaccurate and unfounded."

Paul also said Friday that rookie outfielder Del Alston, like Henricks a left-handed hitter, had been promoted from Syracuse of the International League.

Paul also said Martin failed to show up at a scheduled meeting in New York last Tuesday to discuss the 25th player. Martin said he had a dental appointment and had talked with Paul for 90 minutes the night before on the situation.

Royals' Colborn throws no-hitter against Texas

Colborn struck out six batters, including Bump Wills three times, and walked only one.

The defense came to his aid with several outstanding plays, particularly in the late innings.

In the eighth, Tom Grieve hit a slicing line drive into center that brought the crowd of 29,978 to its feet, but Cowens snared the ball in the webbing of his glove.

Colborn's no-hitter was the first since San Francisco's John Montefusco turned the trick against the Atlanta Braves Sept. 29, 1976.

Colborn, 5-3, who entered the game with an earned run average of 2.61, tops among Kansas City starters, retired the first 14 batters before a breaking pitch in the fifth brushed Toby Harrah, sending him to first base as the first Ranger runner.

Colborn did not allow a base on balls until Jim Sundberg walked leading off the sixth. A double play ball off the bat of Juan Beniquez quickly rubbed out the runner.

The Royals mounted a 2-0 lead in the third, scored two more runs in the sixth and wrapped it up with two more in the eighth.

Colborn, 30, broke into the major leagues with the Chicago Cubs in 1969, posting a 1-0 record in six games. He appeared in 34 games in the 1970 season, primarily as a reliever, and spent part of the 1971 season with the Cubs.

In 1972, he joined Milwaukee as a reliever, but by mid-season had become the Brewers' top starter. The next season, Colborn posted a 20-12 record and was named to the American League All-Star team.

He was traded to the Royals along with catcher Darrell Porter in a deal that sent infielder Jamie Quirk, pitcher Bob McClure and outfielder Jim Wohlford to Milwaukee.

Prior to Saturday, Colborn's finest game came on May 9, 1973, when he hurled a one-hitter against the Rangers—the lone hit being a home run by Jeff Burroughs.

Cards take pair from Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Garry Templeton, Jerry Mumphrey, Ken Reitz and Keith Henandez belted home runs Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals edged the Atlanta Braves 7-6.

The Cards pounded a trio of Braves' pitchers for 14 hits in winning their third game in a row. Clay Carroll, 2-0, was the winner in relief of starter Pete Falcone.

St. Louis took a 5-4 lead in the fifth off Braves' starter and loser Buzz Capra, 0-4, when Mumphrey and Reitz clouted consecutive homers. The Cards added to their margin in the eighth when Mike Tyson singled, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Lou Brock's double.

Hernandez crashed his sixth homer of the year for the final St. Louis run.

Atlanta took a 4-3 lead in the third when Jerry Royster singled, moved to third on Junior Moore's single and continued home when Mumphrey's throw to first was wide and forced catcher Ted Simmons away from the plate. Moore moved up on a walk and Gary Matthews' deep fly to right and scored on Vic Correll's single.

Blues broke?

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The owners of the St. Louis Blues reportedly will file for bankruptcy on behalf of the National Hockey League franchise within the next few weeks, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said.

Sidney Salomon Jr. and Sid Salomon III, both in poor health, have been trying to sell the financially-troubled team and have indicated they would not be involved in hockey for the 1977-78 season.

But because of unfavorable mortgage conditions on the Arena and St. Louis's 5½-per cent amusement tax, the Blues so far have been unable to close a deal with prospective buyers, the Post-Dispatch said.

If no buyer has been found by the conclusion of the NHL's annual meeting in Montreal June 8, the Blues likely would be dissolved with a player dispersal draft then held in advance of the June 14 amateur draft, the newspaper said.

Two other NHL teams reported to be in financial trouble, the Atlanta Flames and the Colorado Rockies, would then be likely candidates to shift to St. Louis, according to the Post-Dispatch.

Rockets on the brink of elimination

PHILADELPIA (AP) — The Houston Rockets, within one game of elimination from the National Basketball Association semifinals, admit arithmetic is an even stronger opponent than the Philadelphia 76ers.

"Mathematically, you've got to say it's almost impossible," Coach Tom Nissalke said of his Rockets' chances of winning the best-of-seven series. "You'd have to be an idiot to say otherwise. Are we in a hole? I'd have to say, yes, we are in a very big hole."

The fifth game of the series is set for Sunday in Philadelphia. If a sixth game is needed, it will be in Houston next Tuesday night.

The 76ers roared back from last Wednesday night's 118-94 loss to smear Houston 107-95 Friday night, deflating the Rockets' dreams. "I felt if we won this game we could win the series," Nissalke said. "I'm not saying we can't. Obviously, we can still win the series.

"But just as obviously, we'd be in much better shape coming off tonight 2-and-2," he said after Friday night's game. "If we could have won, I think we could have won the series and I think we could have beaten Portland in the finals."

After watching Houston star Moses Malone rack up 30 points and 25 rebounds in the third game of the series, Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue moved Caldwell Jones to cover the Rockets' center. Jones held the Houston superstar to five points and 13 rebounds.

"The most important thing was the job Caldwell did on Moses," Shue said. "He was steady all the way. He played the entire second half. As a team, defensively, we were steady. We didn't have too many breakdowns and most of the shots came from the outside."

"Our job is to give them just one shot and then get the rebound," Jones said. "That's our whole game, to get the ball and kick it out. We didn't do that Wednesday night but we did tonight. (Friday)."

Jones had only six points and 11 rebounds for the game, but he said he didn't play for personal recognition.

"I don't get any personal satisfaction out of seeing my name in the paper," Jones said. "I'm not egotistical and I don't mind being in the shadows. Everybody on this team has a role on this team and I know what mine is."

Next week the Sikeston Saints get their Bi-State season underway, with a Wednesday game at Cape and a Sunday game at home against the Perryville Stars. Several ballplayers from both Cape and Sikeston are playing for the Southeast Missouri State Indians, but there still should be enough quality players around to make for an interesting contest. The game starts at 8 p.m.

The Capahas, 1976 League champions, are expected to start righthander Clay Vangilder. Glen Alexander, Ricky Taylor, Mike Brasher and Sammy Taylor are all in the running for the Sikeston starting assignment. The first two listed hurlers are lefties.

Two big voids must be filled in the Sain lineup, at first and in the outfield. Shortstop Grant Dambach is going into business in St. Louis and outfielder-DH Stan Hall has moved to Imperial, California. Both players had outstanding talent but, like Tony Perez and the Cincinnati Reds, their personalities will be mised even more.

With two of last year's .300 hitters missing because of the SeMo team's playoff activity (Rick Eisenbach and Bill Schatzley), the lineup is still a bit undecided. At no time have the Saints had their complete squad on their field during a practice session. David Shell will start at catcher for Sikeston, with Jim Saulter (.279) or David McClarty (.211) at first. Second base will be manned by hard-hitting Sammy Taylor and Bruce Lawrence (.250) will probably start at short. Mike Brasher (.364) will play third and outfielders will be picked from Mitch Walker, Donnie Taylor, Ricky Taylor and Gary Blaylock. Blaylock and either McClarty or Saulter are the top choices as the team's designated-hitter in the first few games.

Jeff Jackson will start against Perryville.

That was some kind of fantastic comeback for the SeMo State Indians. I'm talking about winning 14 of 15 league games after dropping the first three, and overhauling Maryville on the final weekend of the season to win the title by nine percentage points. Two different times lefty Trae Hastings was named pitcher of the week and, on the season's final weekend, Grant Dambach was named hitting star for the week.

It is a tribute to the teamwork of the Indians when you consider that they didn't have a hitter in tthe top five (Hastings and Steve Hosick were sixth and seventh in ERA).

The only league-leading figure provided by the Indians was 78 strikeouts by Hastings.

New channel should improve river fishing

PALMYRA— Jack Fennel has been having a real blast and Mississippi River fishermen should find fishing better for it.

Fennel, Department of Conservation wildlife biologist and an explosives expert, has blasted a 900-foot pilot channel out of a Mississippi River chute near here in an effort to restore year-round flow.

The Corps of Engineers has notched a wing dike above, which had diverted flow away from what locally is called Orton-Fabius channel, allowing it to silt in and become a backwater.

Orton-Fabius is one of three side channels studied by University of Missouri graduate student John Mack Ellis. Each is in a different stage of alteration because of channel structures.

Ellis's study indicates that Buzzard Island still has river fish species such as flathead catfish, while Cottonwood has more of a lake species composition and Orton Fabius is a mixture.

The blasting experiment has two aims-- one to see if restoring the chute will restore river fish species and also to show that using explosives is less costly than dredging. Fennel used dynamite and ammonium nitrate.

The closed-off chutes gradually silt in so that eventually they will become sand bars and fishermen will lose them as places to fish.

"What we've lacked so far is high water to wash out the silt plug," says Bill Dieffenbach, environmental coordinator for the Conservation Department.

Two students, Steven Gutreuter and David Neuswanger, who will be in graduate school at the University of Missouri, will pick up Ellis' study and see what happens to the fish in Orton-Fabius chute now that it is open.

The project is sponsored by the Missouri Cooperative Fishery Research Unit, a joint venture of the Department of Conservation, the University of Missouri, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and is supervised by Conservation Department fisheries biologist Gordon Farabee and Dr. James Reynolds, assistant unit leader.

Loss of backwater and side channel habitat in the Mississippi River has been great, but not nearly as severe as that in the Missouri River where, in Missouri, some 80 per cent of water and wetland habitat is gone.

Recently the Corps of Engineers has begun notching dikes in the Missouri to create a swirling effect that fisheries biologists hope will scour out holes good for fish spawning.

The Mississippi River project is one effort of a group called "GREAT" which stands for Great Rivers Environmental Action Team. Members include the Conservation Department in Missuri and those in Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois, the Corps of Engineers and other federal agencies, especially the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Channel work on the Mississippi River goes back a long way, in fact a hundred years before 1924 which is when Congress first authorized a nine-foot navigation channel and the real push began on dredging and building wing dikes and other structures.

This narrow channel, blasted through a backwater area of a Mississpippi River chute near Palmyra, is expected to improve fishing. Water moving through the channel should flush out accumulated silt and restore a good river fishery. The Department of Conservation-University of Missouri project is part of a program to protect the Mississippi's natural resources from man's changes.

There will be a Sikeston Little League meeting Monday night at 7 p.m. in the SHS fieldhouse on Ables Road. All managers and coaches who have teams in the Musial, American and National Leagues are urged to attend.

Saints meeting

The Sikeston Saints will hold their final practice Sunday afternoon at V.F. W. Stadium, starting at 5 p.m.

Sikeston opens at Cape Wednesday night.

SeMo Indians are playoff- bound

It's great to be in a second year," said Coach Joe Uhls when he learned that his Southeast Missouri State University baseball Indians had received their second consecutive berth in the NCAA regional playoffs. Last season the Tribe won the regional, advanced to the national tournamentand took third place.

Though the decision about where the regional will be held wasn't made until Saturday night, Uhls is busy preparing his team for the tournament. He noted that the regional, regardless of where it is played, will begin on May 19.

Uhls and his Indians are still a little amazed that they are even in the regionals. Going into this weekend's action, only the most ardent SEMO State fan would have given the Tribe even odds of capturing its second MIAA crown in a row.

Trailing the Northwest Missouri State University Bearcats by several percentage points prior to their final league series againsst the Lincoln University Tigers at Capaha Park, the Indians needed a near-miracle, and they got it.

Though the Indians won all three games by 9-0, 11-2, and 12-2 counts, rounding out a 14-4 league season, the title was decided at the other end of the state.

The Bearcats needed only two victories in their three-game series with the Northeast Missouri State University Bulldogs to claim the crown. After weather conditions forced cancellation of the first game on Friday, the Bearcats needed to sweep Saturday's doubleheader, since one loss would give the conference championship to the Tribe.

For a moment it looked as though they might do just that. After winning the first game, the Bearcats trailed by one run with two outs and two men on base in the final inning of the second game. The leading htter in NCAA Division II, Dennis Webb, was at the plate.

On the mound game, the Bearcats trailed by one run with two outs and two men on base in the final inning of the second game. The leading hitter in NCAA Division II, Dennis Webb, was at the plate.

On the mound was senior Mike Lowe of Dexter. Lowe, who had never beaten the Bearcats in his college career, got Webb on an easy grounder, winning the game for the Bulldogs and throwing the conference crown to the Indians.

"I was happy we won, but I wouldn't say that I was surprised Kirksville beat them (NWMSU)," said Uhls. Uhls noted that the Bulldogs are an explosive unit and added that one of the Indians' losses had been to them.

Though the cooperation of NEMSU's Lowe was vital to the conference title, the Tribe must be given credit for not collapsing after being swept in its first conference series of the year, oddly enough, by the Bearcats.

Besides the Lincoln series, the Indians also swept series against the University of Missouri-- Rolla, Central Missouri State University, and Southwest Missouri State University, often in late inning, come-from-behind efforts.

"When we started sweeping all of those series and pulling all of those heroics, I thought it'd be a shame if we didn't win the conference, even after losing three games to Maryville," said Uhls.

Getting credit for the three wins against Lincoln were junior Trae Hastings of Cape Girardeau, freshman Steve Hosick of Columbia, Ill., and junior Don Beuchting of Festus.

Holding the hot stick for the Tribe was senior Grant Dambach of Lilbourn. In 13 trips to the plate Dambach logged nine hits and raised his batting average to a team-leading .348, overtaking teammate Dan Wieser of Trenton, Ill.

Wieser, now batting .337, still leads the squad in doubles with eight, home runs with 11, and runs batted in with 29.

Hastings' victory, a shutout, was nearly his second no-hitter of the season. It was not until the sixth inning that a Tiger got a hit off the hometown left-hander. Hastings' 78 strikeouts led the league and his 2.18 earned run average is the best among the Indians' starting rotation.

Dambach, Wieser and Hastings all seem headed for the same types of honors they received last season. Last year Dambach and Wieser received all-conference and all-star tournament team recognition.

Wieser was also an All-District Five pick and a second team All-American. Hastings, also a second team All-American, was named as the MIAA's Most Valuable Player.

All three, including teammates Mike Samples, a sophomore from West Frankfort, Ill., and Hosick are considered by Uhls as All-American candidates this year.

Advice for Ali-stay away

NEW YORK AP--Hey, Muhammad Ali, wherever you are, were you looking Wednesday night?

Did a lump come in your throat and did you feel a sudden cold chill when Ken Norton came out of his corner like a whirlwind and demolished young Duane Bobick in 58 seconds?

Shades of Dempsey against Firpo, Louis against Schmeling, Marciano against Walcott. You had to look quickly or you missed it.

Now along Bash Boulevard they're saying you have another date-your fourth-with this man in Rio de Janeiro next September. Take some advice from an old friend and a long-time admirer: Skip it. Tell 'em you have you have a crick in the back. Take a trip . Get lost. Say your loving mother begged you never to indulge in violence again. Anyting. Just don't go near Ken Norton until his fists have been defused or he's had a couple of years in Hollywood playing next to movie starlets. Avoid him as you would a hand grenade with the pin pulled out.

Quit while the quitting's good. Don't-with the whole world watching-wind up flat on your back. Let us remember Ali as king of the ring, unmarked, unstopped, standing there, yelling, "I am the greatest!"

You've taken us down an exciting road.

We remember you as the native, big-eyed kid from Louisville, Cassius Clay, who won the light-heavy gold medal in the 1960 Olympics at Rome. We saw them nurture you through your first pro fights. We dendured, even occasionally laughed at, your ridiculous poems.

We were at Miami Beach in 1964 when, as an underwhelming underdog, you threw that pre-fight tantrum mis-interpreted as panic and wrested the world chamipionship from a frightening creature named Liston.

Then came the stormy times-the conversion to Islam, the Black Muslim movement and the new name: Muhammad Ali. The refusal to take the step for military service. It was you against the government and the nation's patriots. You won.

Your title was taken away unjustly. Three and a half years of ring rust. "Ali can never come back," the guys in the sweaty gyms said.

New channel should improve river fishing

PALMYRA— Jack Fennel has been having a real blast and Mississippi River fishermen should find fishing better for it.

Fennel, Department of Conservation wildlife biologist and an explosives expert, has blasted a 900-foot pilot channel out of a Mississippi River chute near here in an effort to restore year-round flow.

The Corps of Engineers has notched a wing dike above, which had diverted flow away from what locally is called Orton-Fabius channel, allowing it to silt in and become a backwater.

Orton-Fabius is one of three side channels studied by University of Missouri graduate student John Mack Ellis. Each is in a different stage of alteration because of channel structures.

Ellis's study indicates that Buzzard Island still has river fish species such as flathead catfish, while Cottonwood has more of a lake species composition and Orton Fabius is a mixture.

The blasting experiment has two aims-- one to see if restoring the chute will restore river fish species and also to show that using explosives is less costly than dredging. Fennel used dynamite and ammonium nitrate.

The closed-off chutes gradually silt in so that eventually they will become sand bars and fishermen will lose them as places to fish.

''What we've lacked so far is high water to wash out the silt plug,'' says Bill Dieffenbach, environmental coordinator for the Conservation Department.

Two students, Steven Gutreuter and David Neuswanger, who will be in graduate school at the University of Missouri, will pick up Ellis' study and see what happens to the fish in Orton-Fabius chute now that it is open.

The project is sponsored by the Missouri Cooperative Fishery Research Unit, a joint venture of the Department of Conservation, the University of Missouri, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and is supervised by Conservation Department fisheries biologist Gordon Farabee and Dr. James Reynolds, assistant unit leader.

Loss of backwater and side channel habitat in the Mississippi River has been great, but not nearly as severe as that in the Missouri River where, in Missouri, some 80 per cent of water and wetland habitat is gone.

Recently the Corps of Engineers has begun notching dikes in the Missouri to create a swirling effect that fisheries biologists hope will scour out holes good for fish spawning.

The Mississippi River project is one effort of a group called ''GREAT'' which stands for Great Rivers Environmental Action Team. Members include the Conservation Department in Missuri and those in Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois, the Corps of Engineers and other federal agencies, especially the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Channel work on the Mississippi River goes back a long way, in fact a hundred years before 1924 which is when Congress first authorized a nine-foot navigation channel and the real push began on dredging and building wing dikes and other structures.

This narrow channel, blasted through a backwater area of a Missisppippi River chute near Palmyra, is expected to improve fishing. Water moving through the channel should flush out accumulated silt and restore a good river fishery. The Department of Conservation-University of Missouri project is part of a program to protect the Mississippi's natural resources from man's changes.

It was no surprise to anyone that Joplin again won the state Jaycee BB Gun Championships, held recently in Kirksville. Joplin has won the state title seven straight years and eight times in the 11-year history of the event and has been International champ two straight years and four times. But one of the finest shooters in the event was Monett's Margie Wallace, also one of the youngest at eight years. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace, Monett, she had the highest average of any eight-year-old in the state meet and had a 94 average for the four positions (standing, prone, sitting and kneeling) that the competitors fire. It was no surprise to anyone that Joplin again won the state Jaycee BB Gun Championships, held recently in Kirksville. Joplin has won the state title seven straight years and eight times in the 11-year history of the event and has been International champ two straight years and four times. But one of the finest shooters in the event was Monett's Margie Wallace, also one of the youngest at eight years. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace, Monett, she had the highest average of any eight-year-old in the state meet and had a 94 average for the four positions (standing, prone, sitting and kneeling) that the competitors fire. PRESIDENT Carter, admitting his "surprise" at the complexities of welfare change, switched from the originally promised detailed reform proposals to a broad statement of policy. Unexpected difficulties were encountered in balancing the stated White House goals of greater economy, simplified administration and fairness to the people affected by welfare programs.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere gratitude for all the kindnesses and courtesies extended to us at the passing of our loved one, Lula Doolin, and to thank those who assisted at the services, those who sent the lovely flowers and thoughtful gifts of food. We appreciate the kindness of the staff of the Nunnelee Funeral Chapel.
In memory of our loved one -- the family of Lula Doolin.
5-15

We sincerely appreciate the kindnesses and courtesies extended to us at the time of our accident. We especially thank the Crossroads CB Club, and the area churches, clubs, and organizations for their donations, cards, letters, calls, and prayers. Words can never express the heartfelt thanks we feel from your thoughtfulness.

SIKESTON PUBLIC SCHOOL INVITES YOU TO THE OPEN HOUSE

711 Aspen Trace 2 blocks south of Jr. High
SATURDAY, MAY 14- 10 am to 5 pm
SUNDAY, MAY 15- 1 pm to 5 pm

The Sikeston Area Vocational School proudly displays a home constructed by the students enrolled in Vocational Building Trades. These students, under the direction of Mr. Wayne Land, are to be commended for the fine work done in making this brick veneer home a reality.

In addition to gaining on the job experience through the actual construction of a home, many hours are spent in the classroom studying building details.

YOU CAN STRUCTURALLY REPAIR
CRACKED CONCRETE WITH
Structural concrete bonding process.

The SCB Process is a proprietary system developed by Adhesive Engineering Company. It is the only complete epoxy injection system that can successfully repair concrete structures cracked by: shrinkage during cure; mechanical overload; temperature changes; base of foundation settlement; and human error.
High strength, low viscosity Concressive adhesives are injected full depth into fissures in concrete down to 0.002 in wide in most cases. When the injected adhesive cures, usually in a few hours, it seals the crack network completely and also restores the concrete to a monolithic load-bearing condition.
The SCB Process is the only crack repair method available from over 50 factory-trained and licensed applicators throughout the world.

OPEN HOUSE

711 Aspen Trace 2 blocks south of Jr. High
SATURDAY, MAY 14- 10 am to 5 pm
SUNDAY, MAY 15- 1 pm to 5 pm

The Sikeston Area Vocational School proudly displays a home constructed by the students enrolled in Vocational Building Trades. These students, under the direction of Mr. Wayne Land, are to be commended for the fine work done in making this brick veneer home a reality.

In addition to gaining on the job experience through the actual construction of a home, many hours are spent in the classroom studying building details.

Deaths

Mattie McNewell

Mrs. Mattie McNewell, 74, 1200 Maude St., died Wednesday in Missouri Delta Community Hospital following an extended illness.

She was born in Bolton, Miss. and had lived in Sikeston 45 years.

Her husband, the Rev. David McNewell, preceded her in death about 30 years ago.

Surviving are: Two sisters, Lula Ward and Littie Mike of Clinton, Miss.; one brother, Amos Adams of Clinton; and two nephews and two nieces.

Services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Monday in the Westend Baptist Church with the Rev. William Hobson officiating.

Burial will follow in the Sunset of Memory Cemetery with Dotson Funeral Home in charge.

Irvin Freeman

MORLEY— Irvin Freeman, 72, a retired farmer, died at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Southeast Hospital in Cape Girardeau where he had been a patient for one week.

Born May 14, 1905 in Conway County, Ark., a son of the late John and Claudia Belle Wilder Freeman, he moved to Morley in 1955 from Damascus, Ark.

On May 24, 1925 at Martinville, Ark. he married Alpha Fay Bryant, who survives.

He was a member of the Morley Church of Christ.

Other survivors include: two sons, Ulyess Lee Freeman of Sikeston and Odis William Freeman of Cape Girardeau; three daughters, Mrs. Henry (Dean) Schiwitz of Benton and Ms. Donald (Margie) Grant and Mrs. Karen Sue Turner of Sikeston; and 18 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Friends may call after 4 p.m. today at Amick-Burnett Funeral Home in Benton.

Services are scheduled at 2 p.m. at the Morley Church of Christ with Woodrow Phillips and George Huffstuter officiating.

Burial will follow in Forst Hills Cemetery near Morley.

Donnie Kester

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Donnie Eric Kester, infant son of George Donnie and Tonna Suzette McCormick Kester, was stillborn at 10 p.m. Friday at Southeast Hospital.

Survivors, in addition to his parents are: paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kester of Scott City; maternal grandfather, David McCormick of Illmo; maternal grandmother, Mrs. Launa Capano of Louisiana; paternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Donna Arnold of St. Louis; maternal great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Alma McCormick of Illmo; and maternal great-grandfather, Milton Sims of St. Louis.

Graveside services will be conducted at 2 p.m. today at Lightner Cemetery at Illmo with the Rev. Herman Baumann, pastor of Eisleben Lutheran Church of Illmo, officiating.

determined by the average length of stay guidelines, a physician advisor must be called to examine the charts to ensure the extension is necessary.

Under the PSRO system, hospitals can apply to be delegated or non-delegated hospitals. Delta Community Hospital is a delegated hospital, which means that staff doctors take turns acting as reviewing physicians. Outside physicians do the review in a non-delegated hospital.

There are 19 delegated hospitals, one non-delegated hospital and one hospital in which delegation has not been determined in the SeMo PSRO organization.

The PSRO review has only been in operation at Delta Community Hospital since February and no one contacted can remember an instance when an extension of stay for a patient was not approved. Kepner and Dr. Raymond Ritter Sr., medical director for the SeMo PSRO, say they do not anticipate any cases of extensions of stay not being granted.

The major complaints offered by the doctors are that they resent the government trying to set up standards for them to treat patients by, and that the time and trouble involved in administering the PSRO's defeat the aim of trimming hospital costs.

Delta Community Hospital has hired three employes to handle the paperwork connected with the administration of the PSRO's. Their combined salaries will come to about $17,000 this year. In addition to hiring these persons, the reviewing physicians or physician advisors are paid $35 an hour for their review work.

Kepner says many of the physician advisors donate the money they earn through the program to the hospital library. HEW has said the PSRO will pay for 100 per cent of the direct labor costs involved with the program. The individual hospitals estimate how much it will cost to do the review for a year, the local PSRO examines the estimate and turns it in to HEW.

At the end of the year, the federal programs do an audit to adjust the difference between the estimated and actual cost of conducting the program that year.

The SeMo PSRO office spent about $290,000 since 1974 to organize and initiate the program in its 20-county area. It took more than two years to set up the PSRO in the various hospitals, and Kepner says the program should be in operation in all the hospitals in the area by mid-June.

He says the PSRO office spent between $85,000-$90,000 the past year. It will probably be impossible to determine whether or not the PSRO system here and in other parts of the nation is indeed economical, until the program has been in operation for a few years, Kepner says.

Some doctors also object to the amount of paperwork required by the PSRO.

"They (the government) have created a bureaucracy with a ton of paperwork," complains Dr. Masters of the Ferguson Medical Group.He points out the Sikeston area is considered to be short on doctors, and the PSRO's take valuable physician hours which could be devoted to caring for more patients. "We don't have time for busywork," he continues. "I spend hours every day just on paperwork."

"I could see it if we had a great deal of physician abuse," he adds, but says he does not think the doctors in Sikeston are acting in anything but the best interests of their patients.

Medical director Dr. Ritter sympathizes with this objection, but says the doctors are not being asked to do anything but document their cases the way they were taught to do.

"It's just a matter of being willing to go along and document this thing," he says. "If I were the patient, I would want my chart to be documented, because I want to get well."

He says careful progress notes are for the benefit of both the doctor and his patient.

The length of stay guidelines are also causing concern for many of the doctors. Dr. Thomas Dorrity, who is chief of surgery at Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Tenn., says the length of stay guidelines are irrational because each patient's case is unique.

"We treat patients, not diseases," he said. Dr. Dorrity spoke to a meeting of the Delta Community Hospital staff recently and urged the doctors to fight for the repeal of the law which set up the PSROs.

He has testified at several Congressional hearings concerning various medical care bills and says American doctors have been too trusting of the government.

"They need to get off their fannies and do their homework" to fight the trend toward socialized medicine in the country, he adds.

Doctors and other hospital personnel also think it is an invasion of the confidential relationship between the doctor and his patient that another physician, the physician advisor, who never sees the patient, has access to his charts.

"The best person to evaluate my patient is me," contends Dr. William Shell. "The reviewing physician (physician advisor) does not look at the patient, he looks at the chart."

And the chart, the doctors maintain, cannot possibly represent to the physician advisor all the particulars of the patient's case. They think reviewing physicians will tend to follow the recommendations of the doctor treating the patient, because the reviewing physician will realize that, not having seen or treated the patient, he is not as qualified to pass judgment about treatment.

Also, the physician advisor may often examine a chart outside his area of specialization, and doctors believe this may reinforce the reviewing physician's reluctance to go against the treating doctor's recommendation.

Dr. Masters said, "Can you see Grinny Ho (a gynecologist) telling Dr. Bill Shell (internal medicine h) his bleeding ulcer has to go home?"

If this is the case, Dr. Masters points out, the program is not going to catch any offenders. Physicians are intelligent people, he says, and any of them woh want to take advantage of the system by keeping patients in the hospital longer than is necessary will know how to design a chart indicating that further care is needed.

The PSRO program in Southeast Missouri is very young, but it has already caused a lot of comement in the medical community. Will it be economical? Will it, as some of the doctors maintain, eventually harm the patients involved?

All of these questions remain to be answered. Kepner sees the PSRO as a chance for area doctors to provide input into the system rather than having it run by outsiders, from the government.

"We're much, much better off handling it at the local level," he maintains.

Dr. Ritter believes the program is necessary because of the complex nature of today's medicine, and thinks the doctors should give the program a chance before they line up in opposition to it.

"When anything's new, you tend to overreact to it," he sayd. "We're here to help Medicare and Medicaid operate in an orderly fashion. We're not out to get anybody."

The fears of local doctors about the PSROs and other governmental programs are directed toward the future. They are afraid the next generation of doctors will accept the regulations as a matter of course. And some of them feel government restrictions will eventually make someone think twice about becoming a doctor.

more efficiency and accountability and is only one example of good things accomplished in government. A watchdog attitude over the way government programs are implemented by voters will help produce better government," he said.

Touching again on voter apathy, Kirkpatrick encouraged more citizen involvement in the casuse of good government by requesting that more register and vote in elections.

"As far as I'm concerned, those who do not vote lost all right to complain about the directions government takes. If you choose to particpate, you'll be contributing toward a healthy economy and a healthy democracy," he said.

Entertainment for the banquet was provided by Lawrence Baker of Hayti. A senior citizen, who was dubed "Mr. B" by his art students while he was a teacher. His program consisted of several humorous stories and folks songs and he accompanied himself on the autoharp.

Ed Felts served as master of ceremonies and the invocation and benediction was offered by the Rev. Jim Norris, pastor of the Nelson Memorial United Metholdist Church. The dinner was prepared and served by members of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

Following the banquet, chamber members elected Edward Falkoff and Dee Dell to three-year terms on the chamber board. Hunt Wellborn was elected to one-year term to fill an unexpired term.

State agency links veterans with benefits

JEFFERSON CITY— "You don't really need a Division of Veterans Affairs during a war," says Division of Veterans Affairs Director A.B. Leavell. "It's only when a war is over that you really need one."

Leavell says that there are 698,000 veterans in Missouri. Along with their families (who are sometimes also eligible for benefits) that means about two million persons to serve in Missouri alone.

The Division of Veterans Affairs is a rather small operation which has a big job. It is composed of around 200 employes statewide who look after the welfare of Missouri veterans.

The Division of Veterans Affairs is a completely separate operation from the federal Veterans Administration. It takes up where the VA leaves off by linking the VA-sponsored benefits to the individuals who request them. "We work as an attorney for the veteran," says Lavell. The service officers in the Division of Veterans Affairs office act as middlemen between the VA and the veteran.

"It's difficult for a veteran to go directly to the VA," says Leavell, so the service officers take the know-how for applying for benefits into the community. They provide information and aid concerning VA benefits; they fill out necessary forms for potential service-receivers and follow up on those applications to see that they are worked on.

The service officers do not serve as lobbyists for passage of state "veteran legislation;" however, passage of this type of legislation has been sparse in the General Assembly. Just recently, the first major piece of legislation benefiting the veteran since the creation of the Division of Veterans Affairs, in 1931, was passed. This was the free license plates for the disabled veteran bill signed by Governor Teasdale on April 12.

Being a part of the Department of Social Services, the Division of Veterans Affairs' main concern is to provide services. The range of services for the veteran runs the gamut from employment assistance to dental treatment to domiciliary care to compensation for service-related injuries and more. Depending upon the eligibility of the veteran, there are many programs designed to aid and assist him or her and his or her family. For example, it is possible for the child of a veteran or his or her spouse to receive educational benefits, or the widow or mother to live in the Veteran's Home when they can no longer care for themselves. A veteran can also receive alcohol and drug abuse treatment.

There is nursing home care, hospitalization, possibility of a pension and even assistance with starting a business available for the asking, in some cases. Many veterans are unaware of the many opportunities available to them.

The Division of Veterans Affais consists of three main programs: the administrative, which deals with accounting and personnel; the services to veterans program, which brings the state and federal benefits into the community; andthe State Federal Soldiers' Home.

The State Federal Soldiers' Home is a benefit offered by the state of Missouri and operated by the Division of Veterans Affairs. Located in St. James, it was begun in 1896. At last count, it was being occupied by 276 veterans and their dependents. It offers both domiciliary care and total nursing care to those who need it.

There is a long waiting list for admission to the home. Some of these people receive financial aid from the government. Leavell says that these people have a good reason for wanting residence. "It keeps them from welfare, in some cases, and gives them dignity," he says, "because this is not charity, but something that they or their families have earned by serving their country."

A second home site is being planned for the Macon area. If the legislature passes the proposal, 65 per cent of the cost could be paid for by federal VA funding.

The Division of Veterans Affairs in Missouri is working to serve the veteran with 154 offices in the state.

"Each veteran is unique. Some may be eligible for certain benefits and some may not be," states Leavell. "Some veterans need everything, some need very little, and some need nothing at all," he says. But whatever the veterans need, the Division of Veterans Affairs is there to try to fill it.

Bicentennial note: The only man ever to benefit from being told to go fly a kite was Benjamin Franklin.

Our favorite paper misspelled "guerrilla" as "gorrilla" — or did they?

There's a couple pumpkin heads in the shop who won't have to dress up for "Boo Night."

Car insurance may become benefit

NEW YORK (AP) — The next significant employe benefits to be added to a growing list might be automobile and home insurance.

While no large employers have made real movement in those areas, the time soon may be ripe, says a spokesman for a firm that advises scores of blue chip companies on employe benefits.

"There is a big void to be filled," said Leonard Mactas, a recognized authority on corporate benefit plans.

Tracing the development of benefits since the end of World War II, Mactas feels that by 1980 some companies may begin to include these two insurances.

"The trend among employers has been to respond to identifiable employe needs," said Mactas. And while homeowners' insurance costs might not have become painfully expensive, auto insurance most certainly has. It's a need.

Other factors are involved also, says Mactas, who heads the Consulting Actuaries Division of Kwasha Lipton, an international firm that helped develop many of today's largest employe benefit programs.

Having sustained repeated losses, automobile insurers are wary of the business, to cite one factor. And large corporations — even smaller ones — can help keep costs in line through the efficiences of volume.

In Mactas' view, the inclusion of these insurances would be in keeping with a trend toward using the corporation as a vehicle to make life more secure for individuals.

Besides volume buying power, or to state it another way, the ability to benefit from lower group rates, the employer also has the ability to analyze complicated contractual plans and provide bookkeeping services as well.

Moreover, the tax laws are such that employers and employes are aggressively interested in benefits rather than wages alone. Most benefits are tax-deductible for the employer and tax-free for the employe.

In addition, benefit plans are believed by many employers to result in greater employe loyalty, and in general to promote happier, more secure and perhaps more productive workers.

State agency links veterans with benefits

JEFFERSON CITY— "You don't really need a Division of Veterans Affairs during a war," says Division of Veterans Affairs Director A.B. Leavell. "It's only when a war is over that you really need one."

Leavell says that there are 698,000 veterans in Missouri. Along with their families (who are sometimes also eligible for benefits) that means about two million persons to serve in Missouri alone.

The Division of Veterans Affairs is a rather small operation which has a big job. It is composed of around 200 employes statewide who look after the welfare of Missouri veterans.

The Division of Veterans Affairs is a completely separate operation from the federal Veterans Administration. It takes up where the VA leaves off by linking the VA-sponsored benefits to the individuals who request them. "We work as an attorney for the veteran," says Lavell. The service officers in the Division of Veterans Affairs office act as middlemen between the VA and the veteran.

"It's difficult for a veteran to go directly to the VA," says Leavell, so the service officers take the know-how for applying for benefits into the community. They provide information and aid concerning VA benefits; they fill out necessary forms for potential service-receivers and follow up on those applications to see that they are worked on.

The service officers do not serve as lobbyists for passage of state "veteran legislation;" however, passage of this type of legislation has been sparse in the General Assembly. Just recently, the first major piece of legislation benefiting the veteran since the creation of the Division of Veterans Affairs, in 1931, was passed. This was the free license plates for the disabled veteran bill signed by Governor Teasdale on April 12.

Being a part of the Department of Social Services, the Division of Veterans Affairs' main concern is to provide services. The range of services for the veteran runs the gamut from employment assistance to dental treatment to domiciliary care to compensation for service-related injuries and more. Depending upon the eligibility of the veteran, there are many programs designed to aid and assist him or her and his or her family. For example, it is possible for the child of a veteran or his or her spouse to receive educational benefits, or the widow or mother to live in the Veteran's Home when they can no longer care for themselves. A veteran can also receive alcohol and drug abuse treatment.

There is nursing home care, hospitalization, possibility of a pension and even assistance with starting a business available for the asking, in some cases. Many veterans are unaware of the many opportunities available to them.

The Division of Veterans Affais consists of three main programs: the administrative, which deals with accounting and personnel; the services to veterans program, which brings the state and federal benefits into the community; andthe State Federal Soldiers' Home.

The State Federal Soldiers' Home is a benefit offered by the state of Missouri and operated by the Division of Veterans Affairs. Located in St. James, it was begun in 1896. At last count, it was being occupied by 276 veterans and their dependents. It offers both domiciliary care and total nursing care to those who need it.

There is a long waiting list for admission to the home. Some of these people receive financial aid from the government. Leavell says that these people have a good reason for wanting residence. "It keeps them from welfare, in some cases, and gives them dignity," he says, "because this is not charity, but something that they or their families have earned by serving their country."

A second home site is being planned for the Macon area. If the legislature passes the proposal, 65 per cent of the cost could be paid for by federal VA funding.

The Division of Veterans Affairs in Missouri is working to serve the veteran with 154 offices in the state.

"Each veteran is unique. Some may be eligible for certain benefits and some may not be," states Leavell. "Some veterans need everything, some need very little, and some need nothing at all," he says. But whatever the veterans need, the Division of Veterans Affairs is there to try to fill it.

Car insurance may become benefit

NEW YORK (AP) — The next significant employe benefits to be added to a growing list might be automobile and home insurance.

While no large employers have made real movement in those areas, the time soon may be ripe, says a spokesman for a firm that advises scores of blue chip companies on employe benefits.

"There is a big void to be filled," said Leonard Mactas, a recognized authority on corporate benefit plans.

Tracing the development of benefits since the end of World War II, Mactas feels that by 1980 some companies may begin to include these two insurances.

"The trend among employers has been to respond to identifiable employe needs," said Mactas. And while homeowners' insurance costs might not have become painfully expensive, auto insurance most certainly has. It's a need.

Other factors are involved also, says Mactas, who heads the Consulting Actuaries Division of Kwasha Lipton, an international firm that helped develop many of today's largest employe benefit programs.

Having sustained repeated losses, automobile insurers are wary of the business, to cite one factor. And large corporations — even smaller ones — can help keep costs in line through the efficiences of volume.

In Mactas' view, the inclusion of these insurances would be in keeping with a trend toward using the corporation as a vehicle to make life more secure for individuals.

Besides volume buying power, or to state it another way, the ability to benefit from lower group rates, the employer also has the ability to analyze complicated contractual plans and provide bookkeeping services as well.

Moreover, the tax laws are such that employers and employes are aggressively interested in benefits rather than wages alone. Most benefits are tax-deductible for the employer and tax-free for the employe.

In addition, benefit plans are believed by many employers to result in greater employe loyalty, and in general to promote happier, more secure and perhaps more productive workers.

No-til farming can save fuel costs while maintaining high yields

By THOMAS BEARDSLEE

No-till farming, farming without cultivation or with very little, has been around for a long time, but it is difficult to change farming methods that have been used for many years.

Farmers are quick to pick up new machinery, chemicals, hybrid seeds, or other technological advances, but seem reluctant to make fewer trips over the field and let the chemicals do the work.

One Bootheel farmer who is not reluctant to use no-til farming methods is Charles Causey, of Dexter Route Two. He has been using the no-till method for several years, and has gotten to the point where, while he still owns a cultivator, he had difficulty remembering if he used it last year.

To be sure, his corn rows have soybean and wheat stubble from previous planting seasons in them, but the rows also have corn standing 18 inches to two feet, that is some of the best looking in the area, while planted the last of March.

Causey says it is unnecessary to make the normal seven to nine trips over a corn field to prepare the ground and plant it. He makes three trips during which he plants, plows out middles for irrigation, and applies chemicals.

Some skeptics might concede that it is possible to plant a crop, using the no-till method, but that the yields will suffer. Wrong again, according to Causey, who said that last year, in a particular 40-acre field, his yields were 55 bushel per acre for wheat, 44 bushel per acre for soybeans, and 165 bushel per acre for corn. All top yields on anyone's farm, till or no-till.

The chemicals and fertilizer used in the corn production was 200 pounds of N, 60 pounds of phosphate, and 100 pounds of potash, along with Atrizine and Lorox. This field, located near Essex, is also flood irrigated during periods of slack rainfall.

Again the skeptics might say, "ok, you can do that for maybe one or two years." Causey has a continuous cornfield that has been a no-till going on its fifth year, still getting top yields.

"No-till isn't for everyone," Causey said, "a good deal of our operation is in the sandy area, which lends itself very well to no-till." Other soil types may not be so successful.

Causey, who farms in partnership with his son Rick and his son-in-law, Lannie Wilkison, has made a bold move this spring in taking a rolling hill area, that has been pasture for at least 18 years, and made one trip over the field applying chemicals, and fertilizer, while planting milo. After a week, the chemicals have done their work on the pasture, and the milo is up a couple inches. Causey says with a little rain, he should have a good stand of milo.

Cautioning that no-till farming is not something you can just jump into, he said he and his partners started out slowly, with 20 acres, then increased it every year, as they learned more about it.

While farming the conventional way or using no-till is pretty much a matter of choice, today, rising fuel costs could necessitate fewer trips over the field, in the near future, and the farmers who have already done their research into the no-till method will be that much ahead.

By THOMAS BEARDSLEE

No-till farming, farming without cultivation or with very little, has been around for a long time, but it is difficult to change farming methods that have been used for many years.

Farmers are quick to pick up new machinery, chemicals, hybrid seeds, or other technological advances, but seem reluctant to make fewer trips over the field and let the chemicals do the work.

One Bootheel farmer who is not reluctant to use no-til farming methods is Charles Causey, of Dexter Route Two. He has been using the no-till method for several years, and has gotten to the point where, while he still owns a cultivator, he had difficulty remembering if he used it last year.

To be sure, his corn rows have soybean and wheat stubble from previous planting seasons in them, but the rows also have corn standing 18 inches to two feet, that is some of the best looking in the area, while planted the last of March.

Causey says it is unnecessary to make the normal seven to nine trips over a corn field to prepare the ground and plant it. He makes three trips during which he plants, plows out middles for irrigation, and applies chemicals.

Some skeptics might concede that it is possible to plant a crop, using the no-till method, but that the yields will suffer. Wrong again, according to Causey, who said that last year, in a particular 40-acre field, his yields were 55 bushel per acre for wheat, 44 bushel per acre for soybeans, and 165 bushel per acre for corn. All top yields on anyone's farm, till or no-till.

The chemicals and fertilizer used in the corn production was 200 pounds of N, 60 pounds of phosphate, and 100 pounds of potash, along with Atrizine and Lorox. This field, located near Essex, is also flood irrigated during periods of slack rainfall.

Again the skeptics might say, "ok, you can do that for maybe one or two years." Causey has a continuous cornfield that has been a no-till going on its fifth year, still getting top yields.

"No-till isn't for everyone," Causey said, "a good deal of our operation is in the sandy area, which lends itself very well to no-till." Other soil types may not be so successful.

Causey, who farms in partnership with his son Rick and his son-in-law, Lannie Wilkison, has made a bold move this spring in taking a rolling hill area, that has been pasture for at least 18 years, and made one trip over the field applying chemicals, and fertilizer, while planting milo. House Ag Committee leaders vote down price support increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee leadership narrowly rebuffed a last-ditch bid Thursday to increase wheat price supports to levels President Carter has said flatly he would veto.

The panel was nearing completion of its work on a 165-page omnibus measure to revise and renew all the major farm programs, Food for Peace programs, food stamps and others related to agriculture.

As it stood, the support levels in the bill were higher than Carter has said he is willing to go, with estimated potential maximum costs of about $3.3 billion.

The President has said he would accept a package with a potential maximum cost of $2 billion a year as an average over five years.

The package adopted last week by the Senate Agriculture Committee would pose a potential maximum of roughly $4.8 billion on the support programs. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told reporters this week Carter would veto that if passed by Congress.

"I have never been so sure of anything in my life," Bergland said.

Nonetheless, Rep. Keith Sebelius, R-Kan., proposed the House committee adopt the other body's levels for wheat, which is already in surplus and will be drawing support payments this year.

An unusually angry Chairman Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., reminded the panel of what Bergland said and that vetoes of farm bills have never been overridden by Congress in recent history.

"I don't like to do useless acts," said Foley, who must present the measure to the House.

"Votes in committee (to please constituents) don't do farmers any good. They can't take them to the bank, they can't eat them. They're absolutely meaningless unless they're enacted into law!" he continued.

Vice Chairman W. R. Poage, D-Tex., who teamed with Foley two weeks ago to gather 13 proxy votes and keep the levels for wheat and feedgrains, then castigated his colleagues.

"I think we're all past the fourth grade here... What we're doing is grasping for nothing. And that's exactly what you're going to get: nothing!" Poage shouted.

Sebelius and Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., countered that wheat farmers face a financial crisis now and corn growers will face one this fall because bumper crops worldwide have depressed their prices below production costs.

Sebelius won, 14 to 9, on a show of hands. Poage called for a recorded vote. Foley voted the 10 proxies he had. Sebelius voted nine that he had, including those of Reps. Paul Findley, R-Ill., and Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., who have never voted for higher supports.

With Sebelius ahead by one, Rep. Dawson Mathis, D-Ga., who had twice abstained, voted with Foley for a tie and the defeat of the bid.

Earlier, the committee voted a four-year extension of the food stamp program with authority for studies and pilot projects on new ways to prevent fraud. As it is now, the appropriations authority is open-ended.

Hay subsidies to resume soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal subsidies to help pay transportation costs of moving hay into drought areas of eight states are expected to resume shortly despite investigations into suspected abuses of the program, an Agriculture Department official said Tuesday.

Robert J. Mondloch of the department's Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service said that new guidelines for making hay payments are about ready for distribution and that when this is done the payments are expected to start again.

"The guidelines are to review the claims that have been filed, and for those that there's no question of, payments should be made immediately," Mondloch said.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told reporters earlier that he does not intend to reinstate the hay transportation program and instead willuse a direct subsidy program already in place to help farmers in the eight-state drought area to buy hay.

Mondloch, asked to about Bergland's remarks, said that he believed Bergland meant that no request will be made to extend the hay transportation subsidy beyond its scheduled expiration date of June 15.

The hay transportation payments and a similar program for getting emergency feed grain rations to drought stricken farmers are financed by the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Actual operations, however, are in Mondloch's agency of USDA. The hay payments were suspended recently because audits indicated that some farmers, truckers and others had filed illegal claims for subsidies.

The hay program provides for subsidies covering up to 80 per cent of the cost of moving hay into drought areas or a maximum of $50 a ton for hay and straw and $12.50 a ton for silage.

Officials say that some truckers reportedly have abused the program by running up transportation charges and, in a few cases, hauling hay into one area and then picking up further loads — or perhaps the same hay and hauling them back in order to double up on payments.

The hay payments were suspended in drought designated counties in Arkansas, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin.

About a dozen other states where drought aid has been ordered are eligible for emergency livestock feed assistance.

Mondloch said that the emergency feed program continues to operate and only the transportation payments were suspended. The feed assistance also is available in the eight states, the only ones where hay transportation help was available.

About $38 million was paid to farmers and truckers for hay hauling as of Arpil 15, with more than half of the money paid out in Minnesota and South Dakota.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland will be in Canada on May 18 for what he calls "just a get-aquainted meeting" with farm officials, but the subject of an international wheat agreement is bound to come up.

Bergland is scheduled to meet with Canadian Minister of Agriculture Eugene F. Whelan and other officials in Ottawa. He told reporters he wants to get to know Whelan.

It's also likely Bergland will see Otto Lang, minister of transportation who also is in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board, one USDA official said Wednesday. Lang visited Bergland here Feb. 25 and talked about the possibility of getting together on wheat prices.

After that meeting, Bergland said he was interested in setting up a bilateral agreement with Canada to set a minimum price for wheat the two countries sell on the world market.

That later evolved into a broader proposal and now includes, potentially at least, Australia, Canada, Argentina and the United States — the major wheat exporters — in a kind of united front on global trading strategy.

Representatives of the four countries met in Ottawa on April 21 "to discuss international wheat matters," as the official joint communique phrased it.

Despite a reluctance to talk specifically about setting wheat prices in world trade, Bergland has said frequently that "some kind of global minimum price" along with a maximum price appears desirable.

The Ottawa meeting next week also is a warmup for a meeting in London next month of the International Wheat Council. At that time, the matter of setting world wheat prices is expected to be a major agenda item.

It stands to reason that Bergland would like to have Canada's cooperation before the U.S. goes to the London meeting, according to one USDA source.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's milk production is larger than a year earlier, according to the Agriculture Department.

Production in April was more than 10.7 billion pounds, up 2.5 per cent from the same month of last year and 6.5 per cent more than in April 1975, officials said Wednesday.

Average production per cow was 977 pounds in April, 29 pounds more than a year earlier and 74 pounds more than in April two years ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Agriculture Department scientist said today that control measures should be initiated immediately to slow the spread of pseudorabies, a serious disease of swine, but that an all-out eradication program is not feasible now.

"We need to know more about the amount and distribution of the disease," said Dr. F.J. Mulhern, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Services (APHIS). "Such an eradication program would be expensive, so we need to be sure of our facts before launching such an effort."

Mulhern's remarks were prepared for a meeting in Columbus, Ohio, of the Livestock Conservation Institute. The statement was released here by the department.

"We need to be sure we have a safe and effective vaccine," Mulhern said. "And finally, we need a quicker and more economical test. While we get this information, we must make sure we don't take steps that might jeopardize any future eradication effort."

Pseudorabies, also known as Aujeszky's disease and mad itch, has increased sharply in recent years. Some 714 cases were confirmed last year, compared with 225 in 1975 and 125 in 1974. It can cause death losses of up to 100 per cent in pigs less than two weeks old.

The disease, which does not affect humans, can be transmitted to cattle and sheep in which it is considered fatal and is accompanied by signs of severe itching and self-mutilation. It also can affect cats, dogs and wildlife.

Mulhern said control measures should include surveys to determine the extent of the disease nationwide, vaccinations of infected herds, procedures for cleaning up infected herds and testing to insure against a recurrence, state and federal shipping rules for all kinds of swine and additional research.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scores of farm women have flooded Congress with letters and their own voices in recent weeks in a desperate effort to goad action on raising 1977 wheat supports much higher than it seems likely will be approved.

But most of the women from Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and other big wheat states say they are not giving up until Congress finally makes up its mind on new farm legislation.

Some will admit, however, that theirs is a formidable task and that while most farm officials in the Carter administration and members of Congress express sympathy none apparently is able to make solid promises.

Mariann Johnson, who helps run a family farm near Medford, Okla., was among about 100 in the Agri-Women's Group which visted congressional and administration farm representatives here last week.

"We feel that they listened to us, but they made no promises," Mrs. Johnson told a reporter.

After meeting with Deputy Secretary of Agriculture John White and others, Mrs. Johnson said, "We were told that they are working on it but that they have just so much money in the budget and it has to cover all of agriculture."

What Mrs. Johnson and most other wheat farmers want is for Congress and the administration to agree on substantially higher government loan rates for 1977 wheat instead of the $2.25 a bushel which seems to be in the works.

Mrs. Johnson said that while the group had good in most cases in getting so present their views up and down the halls of Congress, the Senate and House agricultural committee were another matter.

"We're wondering just exactly what they think they're doing with us, and we're not having a whole lot of luck getting in to see them," she said.

Mrs. Johnson said that wheat supports have got to be raised and that "its got to be not less than $3" a bushel for the loan rate for the 1977 crop. "Some of us can make it on $3, some of us are going to have to have $3.50 or even up to $4" a bushel, she said.

The loan rate is how much a wheat producer can borrow from USDA by using his crop as collateral, normally paying off the loan if the cash market price is higher later on. If not, the crop is forfeited, the loan cancelled and the wheat becomes the property of the government.

Another support mechanism is the so-called target price. The Senate committee has approved raising it to $2.90 a bushel from $2.47 which currently is in effect for the 1977 wheat crop. If market prices fall below the target, government subsidies are paid growers to make up the difference.

Cotton planters work between rain showers

JOE H. SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

Cotton growers tried to complete their planting between showers last week. Most growers have been able to plant their sandy loam soil. Some of the mid-April plantings were replanted due to cool weather and chemical injury. However, good stands can be observed in many parts of the Bootheel and growers should wind up their planting this week as not many are going to plant after May 15.

Early season insect and postemergence weed control has started, as thrips are moving out of wheat fields and weeds are escaping some of the preemergence treatments.

Try not to delay cotton by spraying "over top". Direct postemergence herbicides onto weeds and not on your cotton plants. DSMA is not as hard on young cotton as MSMA. After cotton starts growing and gets a root system established, MSMA in combination with Cotoran, Caparol or Probe can be directed on three inch and taller cotton. Karmex, Dynex, etc. plus MSMA can be directed on six inch cotton.

Be sure to read and follow all label directions as we have already had injury to stands of cotton due to not following soil type recommendations on label.

Our entomologists at the Delta Center have been out scouting crops for insects. Last week they found armyworms in wheat and cut worms damaging corn. Some of these pests amy move into border rows of cotton.

U.S. productivity may slow inflation

NEW YORK (AP) — The fact that output per manhour of Americans is rising again won't create the headlines that might come from the economic summit meeting in London, but it is probably more significant.

A rise in output per manhour, or productivity, undercuts inflation. And is there any economic news that is more welcome and meaningful than that? Hardly.

The summit is made up of good intentions, negotiations, agreements and goals. Productivity is what already has been accomplished. And based on the latest figures those accomplishments have been great.

Whereas the long-term growth in productivity, based on measurements since World War II, has been about 2.3 per cent a year, the increase during the first quarter of 1977 was at a 3.2 per cent annual rate.

Equally encouraging, this measurement of the efficiency with which we utilize our labor, resources, plant, equipment and capital surged over the rate achieved in the previous quarter, the final one of 1976.

Many economists would like to see the first-quarter rate exceeded in subsequent quarters, because then it would demonstrate conclusively that there is vitality left in the American system. But 3.2 really isn't bad.

It most certainly will be the most important counterforce to the inflationary thrust of economic activity, because rising productivity means we are getting our products onto the market at a lower cost.

It doesn't mean we are slaving all the harder to turn out more widgets per worker. It does mean that we are working smarter — we are employing our skills, our factory space, our technology, our brains, our money.

Seldom do we see any figures on the inflationary impact of using these ingredients inefficiently, but it is in that inefficiency that inflation is born and nourished.

Unfortunately, we have never quite learned to maintain peak efficiency for very long. Sooner or later we become sloppy in the employment of our various resources. Up go prices, down goes economic activity.

It is at the low points in economic activity that we manage to get ourselves together and once again utilize our resources in a more efficient manner.

Employment is pared, frills are eliminated, expense accounts are scrutinized, unproductive projects and products are cut, inefficient factories are closed. The company becomes lean; it gets into shape.

Having demonstrated its efficiency, the rewards soon begin to accumulate. Profits improve. But the new sense of security begins to soften the discipline and dedication.

Gradually the hard-won efficiency is lost again. We seek more than we produce. We seek to be served. And prices rise.

After having bounced along in this cycle since the founding of the country, it would seem about time to come up with some answers.

But until we do, we can take some comfort — better watch it, not too much — from the realization that increasing productivity is right now working to undermine some of those inflationary pressures.

Actual operations, however, are in Mondloch's agency of USDA. The hay payments were suspended recently because audits indicated that some farmers, truckers and others had filed illegal claims for subsidies.

The hay program provides for subsidies covering up to 80 per cent of the cost of moving hay into drought areas or a maximum of $50 a ton for hay and straw and $12.50 a ton for silage.

Officials say that some truckers reportedly have abused the program by running up transportation charges and, in a few cases, hauling hay into one area and then picking up further loads — or perhaps the same hay and hauling them back in order to double up on payments.

The hay payments were suspended in drought designated counties in Arkansas, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin.

About a dozen other states where drought aid has been ordered are eligible for emergency livestock feed assistance.

Mondloch said that the emergency feed program continues to operate and only the transportation payments were suspended. The feed assistance also is available in the eight states, the only ones where hay transportation help was available.

About $38 million was paid to farmers and truckers for hay hauling as of Arpil 15, with more than half of the money paid out in Minnesota and South Dakota.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland will be in Canada on May 18 for what he calls "just a get-aquainted meeting" with farm officials, but the subject of an international wheat agreement is bound to come up.

Bergland is scheduled to meet with Canadian Minister of Agriculture Eugene F. Whelan and other officials in Ottawa. He told reporters he wants to get to know Whelan.

It's also likely Bergland will see Otto Lang, minister of transportation who also is in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board, one USDA official said Wednesday. Lang visited Bergland here Feb. 25 and talked about the possibility of getting together on wheat prices.

After that meeting, Bergland said he was interested in setting up a bilateral agreement with Canada to set a minimum price for wheat the two countries sell on the world market.

That later evolved into a broader proposal and now includes, potentially at least, Australia, Canada, Argentina and the United States — the major wheat exporters — in a kind of united front on global trading strategy.

Representatives of the four countries met in Ottawa on April 21 "to discuss international wheat matters," as the official joint communique phrased it.

Despite a reluctance to talk specifically about setting wheat prices in world trade, Bergland has said frequently that "some kind of global minimum price" along with a maximum price appears desirable.

The Ottawa meeting next week also is a warmup for a meeting in London next month of the International Wheat Council. At that time, the matter of setting world wheat prices is expected to be a major agenda item.

It stands to reason that Bergland would like to have Canada's cooperation before the U.S. goes to the London meeting, according to one USDA source.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's milk production is larger than a year earlier, according to the Agriculture Department.

Production in April was more than 10.7 billion pounds, up 2.5 per cent from the same month of last year and 6.5 per cent more than in April 1975, officials said Wednesday.

Average production per cow was 977 pounds in April, 29 pounds more than a year earlier and 74 pounds more than in April two years ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Agriculture Department scientist said today that control measures should be initiated immediately to slow the spread of pseudorabies, a serious disease of swine, but that an all-out eradication program is not feasible now.

"We need to know more about the amount and distribution of the disease," said Dr. F.J. Mulhern, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Services (APHIS). "Such an eradication program would be expensive, so we need to be sure of our facts before launching such an effort."

Mulhern's remarks were prepared for a meeting in Columbus, Ohio, of the Livestock Conservation Institute. The statement was released here by the department.

"We need to be sure we have a safe and effective vaccine," Mulhern said. "And finally, we need a quicker and more economical test. While we get this information, we must make sure we don't take steps that might jeopardize any future eradication effort."

Pseudorabies, also known as Aujeszky's disease and mad itch, has increased sharply in recent years. Some 714 cases were confirmed last year, compared with 225 in 1975 and 125 in 1974. It can cause death losses of up to 100 per cent in pigs less than two weeks old.

The disease, which does not affect humans, can be transmitted to cattle and sheep in which it is considered fatal and is accompanied by signs of severe itching and self-mutilation. It also can affect cats, dogs and wildlife.

Mulhern said control measures should include surveys to determine the extent of the disease nationwide, vaccinations of infected herds, procedures for cleaning up infected herds and testing to insure against a recurrence, state and federal shipping rules for all kinds of swine and additional research.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scores of farm women have flooded Congress with letters and their own voices in recent weeks in a desperate effort to goad action on raising 1977 wheat supports much higher than it seems likely will be approved.

But most of the women from Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and other big wheat states say they are not giving up until Congress finally makes up its mind on new farm legislation.

Some will admit, however, that theirs is a formidable task and that while most farm officials in the Carter administration and members of Congress express sympathy none apparently is able to make solid promises.

Mariann Johnson, who helps run a family farm near Medford, Okla., was among about 100 in the Agri-Women's Group which visted congressional and administration farm representatives here last week.

"We feel that they listened to us, but they made no promises," Mrs. Johnson told a reporter.

After meeting with Deputy Secretary of Agriculture John White and others, Mrs. Johnson said, "We were told that they are working on it but that they have just so much money in the budget and it has to cover all of agriculture."

What Mrs. Johnson and most other wheat farmers want is for Congress and the administration to agree on substantially higher government loan rates for 1977 wheat instead of the $2.25 a bushel which seems to be in the works.

Mrs. Johnson said that while the group had good in most cases in getting so present their views up and down the halls of Congress, the Senate and House agricultural committee were another matter.

"We're wondering just exactly what they think they're doing with us, and we're not having a whole lot of luck getting in to see them," she said.

Mrs. Johnson said that wheat supports have got to be raised and that "its got to be not less than $3" a bushel for the loan rate for the 1977 crop. "Some of us can make it on $3, some of us are going to have to have $3.50 or even up to $4" a bushel, she said.

The loan rate is how much a wheat producer can borrow from USDA by using his crop as collateral, normally paying off the loan if the cash market price is higher later on. If not, the crop is forfeited, the loan cancelled and the wheat becomes the property of the government.

Another support mechanism is the so-called target price. The Senate committee has approved raising it to $2.90 a bushel from $2.47 which currently is in effect for the 1977 wheat crop. If market prices fall below the target, government subsidies are paid growers to make up the difference.

NORTHEAST'S ECONOMIC LAG

The Northeast section of the country may be withering on the economic vine, but it is a long way from falling off the tree.

The Northeast, which stretches from Maine to Washington, D.C., is still the national leader in personal income, according to an analysis by The Conference Board, the business- supported research organization. The region's sluggish economic growth does give cause for concern, however.

Personal income growth in the Northeast's large metropolitan areas was considerably under the national average between 1969 and 1974. Their share of U.S. personal income declined from 25.9 per cent to 24.2 per cent during this period. If present trends continue, this share will fall to 20.1 per cent by 1990.

Real personal income in the New York metropolitan area, traditionally the Northeast's pacesetter, has barely grown in recent years. It rose only one-tenth of one per cent between 1969 and 1974, compared with a 12 per cent gain for the nation as a whole. New York's particular dilemma has not been in losing firms, but in failing to create new ones to take their place.

The Northeast still has a lot going for it in terms of expanding markets and new investment opportunities. But the problem is not likely to be solved, says the analysis, until the region "recreates that previous environment which spurred the creation of innovative businesses."

SOMETHING NEW FOR OLDER FOLKS

There's been something new for older folks of Monroe County this year and has been for several years.

It is the closing of schools because of the weather.

Before consolidations and the use of buses, it was seldom if ever that any of the then nearly 100 schools in the county closed because of the weather.

There was no need to do so. During extremes of weather, students were taken to school in buggies, wagons and on horseback, or got there through the use of "shanks mares" — they walked, bundled up in layers upon layers of clothes, including "long john" underwear, lugging books, tablets, and tin or paper boxes in which were stored a cold lunch.

Times do change, and we believe, for the better.

WINTER CHEERLEADER

What living creature can match the optimism, ebullience, cheerfulness and enthusiasm of the chickadee? He's the gladhander and the backslapper of the bird world. He's the one who insists the north wind isn't really as sharp as yesterday, the apples are not as moldy as last year's, and the blue jays are not as obnoxious as the summer starlings. The chickadee praises the old peanut butter on the feeder, acclaims the sight of even soft sunflower seeds with-joy, and is sure to be the one to point out that half a roof is better than none.

And he will be that way all winter, through blizzard and freeze, when water buckets are frozen or drifts cover seedpods. Maybe his constant cheerfulness gets to be obnoxious to other birds, but it's welcome, for people.

If something so tiny and frail can not only survive our northern winters but actually be happy about them, why shouldn't insulated central-heating-system man be able to bear them?

SPRING HAS SPRUNG

Lindzen says what you and we thought was a perfectly miserable winter these last few months was really a great winter — from his standpoint. It was great, he says, because it had clear patterns, making it useful to those like himself who are interested in improving their ability to predict the weather.

Well, we wish him luck in predicting better weather for next winter. But he can have the last one. Grubbing out frozen gardenia bushes has confirmed all our dark thoughts about zero weather.

We mention all this not to remind you of past miseries but simply because as you read this all those miseries should be definitely in the past. It is time to rejoice, for at 11:43 a.m. this day spring arrives. We knew all the time it would — eventually.

No more dead auto batteries. No more frozen water pipes. No more snow to pelt your face. No more huge fuel bills and cold evenings huddled around the television set. No more expensive firewood to buy. Well, at least we hope all those things are true.

SHE WORKED FOR US ALL

When one thinks of Mississippi as it was a little more than a decade ago, one thinks of the oppression: Several civil rights workers were lynched practically in broad daylight, most Negroes could not vote and the rigid segregation of the races was the order of the day.

Of the many forces that came together to alter those conditions, none was more impressive than the poor black people them selves. They rose in righteous but peaceable anger and demanded to be free. And when thinking of them, it is impossible not to think of Fannie Lou Hamer, a stout stalwart sharecropper, born of that soil, who fought against all odds for a better tomorrow. She died recently near her Ruleville hemo at the age of 59 after suffering from diabetes, breast cancer and heart trouble.

The Mississippi Mrs. Hamer leaves behind is changed in great measure because of the strength and leadership she gave to sharecroppers like herself who earned subsistence wages under conditions that owed more to slavery than to the Declaration of Independence or the Bill of Rights. Indeed, it was their pursuit of happiness that threatened their lives time and again. Many of the outsiders who came to Mississippi to help those impoverished farmers either were well-known when they arrived or became famous in the process — Martin Luther King, Andrew J. Young Stokeley Carmichael and John Lewis, among others.

There was little fame and celebrity for the local blacks. They stayed on long after the celebrities left and finished the job as best they could, helping as Mrs. Hamer did to unify the Mississippi Democratic Party and working in other ways to heal their society and seek justice. Their names are mostly forgotten, but the image of Fannie Lou Hamer, her voice thunderous, pleading to be seated at the Democratic National Convention in 1964, will remain fixed for many of those who heard her simple, powerful eloquence. And anyone who ever heard Fannie Lou Hamer sing "O, Freedom," will have little difficulty remembering her.

She had been beaten and jailed many times, but she said she could not hate anybody "and hope to see God's face." Her special brand of courage, a courage equal to the demands of her time, is best summarized in the story of how she came to leave the plantation. She knew that if she continued her civil rights works, she would be thrown off and separated from her livelihood. She came to church one day and reported on the consequences of her persistence. "They kicked me off the plantation," she said. "They set me free. It's the best thing that could happen. Now I can work for my people." Except she worked for more than her people. She worked for all of us.

FIRE! FIRE!

A member of the local syndicate, recuperating from a gunshot wound, was wheelchairing down the hospital corridor when a fire extinguisher accidentally fell from its place on the wall and narrowly missed the wheelchair and its occupant. Thinking it was another attack by the hit man, the gangster started screaming for help and went wheeling down the corridor with all his might. A couple of orderlies, thinking the patient had gone perserk, took out after him. A passing nurse, who had snatched up the fallen fire extinguisher, decided that the patient had priority over hospital equipment, and not knowing if it was safe to toss aside the extinguisher, hung on to it and joined the chase.

The procession careened around a turn and almost ran down two elderly ladies on their way to visit sick friends.

Recovering from their sudden fright, the two stared after the fast-moving entourage.

"Now that's what I call fun!" exclaimed one of the old ladies, her eyes twinkling. "Outracing everybody in a wheelchair, yet!"

"That poor man isn't racing for fun, Sarah," the other said, awestruck. "Didn't you see the size of that needle the nurse was aiming at him?"

$64,000 IS TOO LOW

WASHINGTON— The news item that rocked America last week was that it now costs parents $64,000 to rear a child, including education at a state-supported university. A low-income family can rear one for $44,000 if you forget about his or her schooling.

According to Prof. Thomas J. Espenshade of Florida State University, this is a 60 percent increase over what it cost in 1969.

With all due respect to Prof. Espenshade, I think his figures are too low. While he threw in the usual things such as food, clothing, housing and education, I think he failed to take into consideration the following items:

--Automobile insurance for a teen-ager: $1,000 a year.

--Automobile insurance for the parents, when the company cancels everyone's policy because of the claims filed for the teen-ager's accidents: $3,000.

--Repairs to interior of the house after a party given by teen-ager for 50 of his or her "dearest" friends: $2,000.

--Food and drink dispensed to non-members of the family, who for one reason or another are always at the house: $6,000.

--Rug and furniture damage caused by teen-ager's untrained dog: $2,500.

--Rock concert tickets for children starting at age 11 and lasting until they get a job, which could be age 30: $3,800.

--Orthodontist bills for straightening teeth by braces: $2,000.

--Orthodontist bills for replacing braces that were accidentally lost on overnight camping trip: $1,200.

--Hi-fi equipment, absolutely essential to the peace of mind of a young person: $100 to $1,000, depending on whether child pays cash or uses family credit card.

--Birthday presents for friends who are having lavish parties their parents can't afford: $1,200.

--Birthday parties you give for your own children that you can't afford: $2,000.

--Collect telephone calls from children at camp, school or gas station on the highway, to find out why kids have not called collect in three weeks: $5,600.

--Unpaid tickets for illegal parking sent to parents because car is registered in their name: $780.

--Fines for library books overdue: $150.

--Cost of hiring someone to cut lawn because children don't have "time" to do it: $3,400.

--Football, baseball, hockey uniforms (now both male and female): $890.

--New clothes for Barbie and Ken dolls: $4,500.

--Gas and oil used for car pools for student and athletic activities: $3,000 (and expected to go higher).

--Records and tapes that children will die if they don't own: $4,700.

--Visits to hospital emergency rooms: $2,000.

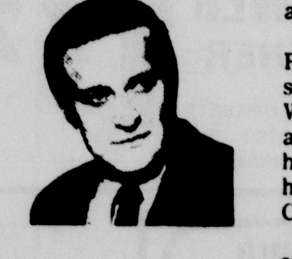
--School prom tickets, as well as rental of tuxedos for boys, purchase of dresses for girls and money to "go out after the dance": $600.

--Replacement of wine and booze stolen from liquor cabinet or closet by persons unknown: $1,500 to $5,000, depending on what kind of wine you keep and how well you hide the key to cabinet or closet.

--Miscellaneous items not covered in the study by Prof. Espenshade: legal fees for pot busts and arrests for disorderly conduct or sit-downs to protest building of nuclear energy plants; damage to neighbor's property done by your children; abortions; purchase of church or school raffle tickets your children have been unable to sell; parcel post packages; ski trips; remedial reading; Christmas. To be on the conservative side, we'll put down $8,780.

Prof. Espenshade did a good job, but I suspect he just didn't talk to the right people.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND



Microbiological Compounds Could Be the Answer

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON: Great quantities of the nation's dwindling oil and gas are poured inot the petro-chemical fertilizers that farmers spread on their fields. The chemicals wash into the streams, polluting scarce water supplies in the dry western states.

One evidence of the pollution is a coating of algae, which forms on lakes and rivers. So the enterprising petro-chemical companies are now offering "algaecides" to rid the water of the floating growth. Thus the companies create pollution and then cure it -- all through the magic of chemicals.

This heavy dosage of chemicals in the environment not only uses up precious oil and gas, but damages the soil and contaminates the waterways, in the opinion of environmental scientists. It is a deadly cycle that has been tolerated in order to nourish the nation's crops.

But now some agricultural experts believe that microbiological compounds may be better for the crops than chemical fertilizers. They claim these microbiological alternatives cost far less, save petroleum and replenish the soil.

A microbiological additive, called BX, has been used on test farms in the San Joaquin Valley. So we sent our reporter-at-large, Hal Bernton, into the California fields to check on the results.

He strolled through field after field of delicate asparagus in the low-lying delta outside Stockton. For years, these fields have been enriched with nitrogen fertilizers, with mixed results. The run-offs, for example, have polluted the river water used for irrigation.

Two years ago, farmer Bill Salamon grudgingly agreed to experiment with BX on an unproductive 20-acre field of asparagus. He is a friendly man, with a flamboyant golden moustache. Under a wide-brimmed white hat, he took Bernton on a tour of the experimental asparagus.

The harvest, he attested, surpassed anything the field had produced when it was treated with chemicals. He became so enthusiastic about BX that he has fertilized his entire asparagus crop and 300 arces of tomatoes this year with the microbiological product.

Bernton also gave the BX-nourished asparagus the ultimate test; he tasted them. He reported approvingly that they were the most tender, delicious asparagus he had ever eaten.

BX was developed by Vaclav Petrik, a thin, gray Czech scientist who survived a World War II concentration camp and the 1968 invasion of his homeland. He now putters over his experiments in a small California town.

He explained to us that the soil is the "stomach" of the plant, that healthy soil is filled with bacteria which transforms organic matter into the nutrients necessary for plant growth. The massive use of chemical fertilizers, fungicides and pesticides, he believes, has killed off many of these vital bacteria.

So Petrik began growing these bacteria in his laboratory. He has now mixed the bacteria into his BX formula which, he contends, restores the soil's natural vitality.

His experiments place the conscientious refugee scientist directly in the path of the mighty petro-chemical combines, whose salesmen are pressuring farmers to use more chemical fertilizers. The petro-chemical industry has also had a cozy relationship with the citadel of agricultral research, the University of California at Davis.

One of the university's most distinguished researchers, Professor Roy Rauschklob, has refused to test BX at the university. "Based on my experience and knowledge of soil-plant-water relationships," he told us, "I do not see how it would be possible for this product to substitute for chemical fertilizers."

He added cautiously that microbiological additives can be helpful and that the university is pursuing its own lines of microbiological research.

The Agriculture Department and Environmental Protection Agency, meanwhile, are watching the microbiologial experiments closely. The government experts told us they are impressed with the preliminary results.

It remains to be seen, however, whether the refugee from Czechoslavakia will triumph over the powerful petro-chemical combines.

Pentagon Profits: Some of the nation's biggest defense contractors are trying to destroy a federal, finger-in-the-dike agency which monitors excess profits in Pentagon contracts.

For years, the Renegotiation Board dodged its responsibility to squeeze some of the inflated profits out of military contracts. All but one of its members, Goodwin Chase, seemed unconcerned about military profiteering.

Now President Carter has named Chase to head the board and has appointed other members who support his views. This has caused panic in the executive suites of the big defense contractors.

Suddenly, a deluge of letters has hit Capitol Hill from such powerful corporations as Litton, Tenneco, Bendix, U.S. Gypsum, Honeywell, Hewlett-Packard, TRW, Standard Oil of California, U.S. Steel, Upjohn and Boeing.

We have obtained the battle plans incidentally of a Chamber of Commerce campaign for fighting the reinvigorated Renegotiation Board. The plans call for letters to Senate and House members to influence their votes.

The corporate pressure, unfortunately, has had its effect. Despite the board's potential for saving billions of dollars, its supporters believe they have only a 50-50 chance of saving the board from being detoothed.

Tie-less in Politics:

Black leaders charge White House Chief of Staff Jordan with political bias

WASHINGTON— Sartorially and politically, the 32-year-old White House chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, wears no ties. His intimates say he owes nothing to anyone. And will tell you so.

And the black leaders here, up and down the Hill, say he has been sending them unsubtle signals that he owes them even less.

Congressional Black Caucus members, some of whom say they've been slapped in the face by Jimmy Carter's refusal to see them, and some of whom say the insult is as searing as any to which they've been subjected, charge the shoulder-shrugging Jordan with keeping the 16-member coalition on an enemies list.

In the next few weeks, this black anger may break out publicly when they test his power. The veteran Jordan knows it.

But few, indeed, bypass him inside the White House. Appointments secretary to the President, Tim Kraft, reports to Jordan. There's no game plan yet on whom Jordan consults before he sees the President. Obviously no one.

It was Kraft who brushed off the Congressional Black Caucus on March 23 with a the-President-will-try-to-see-you-sometime letter when the CBC sought an appointment specifically to discuss the heavily-amended Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill.

No one this minute wants to joust openly with a powerful White House chief of staff. But there are caucus leaders who are beginning to talk for background.

"Hamilton Jordan just simply believes that neither he nor the President need to touch base with the caucus," one black official said. "It springs out of the lateness of some of our people getting on board the Carter primary special, away back then.

"When Tim Kraft wrote that letter to us, he first consulted Hamilton Jordan. So we were brushed off. What we are seeing here is an unwritten White House policy of 'put them on the back burner.' That's what we're hearing from the White House in general and the Jordan office in particular."

Actually this source was tougher with Jordan than the authorized quote implies. The source added that with few exceptions, both Jordan and the Democratic National Committee, which he controls, are scuffing as well as snubbing the blacks. Placing few of them in authoritative positions. Actual tokenism.

"You know all about affirmative action," I was told. "Well, take a look at the racial composition of Jordan's staff. In affirmative action, they call such a survey a 'utilization study.' Take a look. See who is there. What positions are held by blacks, other minorities or women? You find few in any substantive or influential spot. That is where the damage is. Jordan wears no ties. He says he owes us nothing."

Another black leader says that Jordan has a thing on outsiders. He believes, for example, that "they hate us up in New York." And of Jordan, the black sources, mixing some amusement, contempt and anger, say, "If you're not of his original tight in-group, you're just not in."

In the black congressional community, the intent is to go directly to the President. That will take some high hurdling. Already Congressman Gus Hawkins, co-sponsor with Sen. Hubert Humphrey of the full employment bill, has been consulted by Jimmy Carter's labor and economic brain-trusters, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Reportedly Congressman Hawkins dumped on them politely. He reminded them, it's said, that the President committed himself to the full employment program during the campaign. And now the black community -- in fact the entire liberal alliance -- wants delivery. This conversation was held in Hawkins's office last week.

Hawkins says he knows that the President is in a tight spot. But what disturbs this black California Congressman is what he calls the White House "cheerleader atmcsphere."

"I am even more leary of White House economists' rah-rah predictions," Hawkins has written.

So he and Sen. Humphrey are seeking to leapfrog Jordan for a White House showdown with President Carter.

Humphrey and Hawkins are organizing a broad front of some 30 major labor, civil rights, social service, religious (all faiths) and black national organizations. Within "10 days" they will ask the President for an appointment for a frank discussion of the full employment bill, face to face with their committee, in the White House. It is now in the House subcommittee on employment opportunities (the old manpower subcommittee).

They want the action they were promised. They want to get off Jordan's back burner and put the President's advisers on the hot seat.

They're telling Hamilton Jordan, in effect, to junk his loyalty test. He has no monopoly, they say, on going tie-less.

NORTHEAST'S ECONOMIC LAG

The Northeast section of the country may be withering on the economic vine, but it is a long way from falling off the tree.

The Northeast, which stretches from Maine to Washington, D.C., is still the national leader in personal income, according to an analysis by The Conference Board, the business- supported research organization. The region's sluggish economic growth does give cause for concern, however.

Personal income growth in the Northeast's large metropolitan areas was considerably under the national average between 1969 and 1974. Their share of U.S. personal income declined from 25.9 per cent to 24.2 per cent during this period. If present trends continue, this share will fall to 20.1 per cent by 1990.

Real personal income in the New York metropolitan area, traditionally the Northeast's pacesetter, has barely grown in recent years. It rose only one-tenth of one per cent between 1969 and 1974, compared with a 12 per cent gain for the nation as a whole. New York's particular dilemma has not been in losing firms, but in failing to create new ones to take their place.

The Northeast still has a lot going for it in terms of expanding markets and new investment opportunities. But the problem is not likely to be solved, says the analysis, until the region "recreates that previous environment which spurred the creation of innovative businesses."

SOMETHING NEW FOR OLDER FOLKS

There's been something new for older folks of Monroe County this year and has been for several years.

It is the closing of schools because of the weather.

Before consolidations and the use of buses, it was seldom if ever that any of the then nearly 100 schools in the county closed because of the weather.

There was no need to do so. During extremes of weather, students were taken to school in buggies, wagons and on horseback, or got there through the use of "shanks mares" — they walked, bundled up in layers upon layers of clothes, including "long john" underwear, lugging books, tablets, and tin or paper boxes in which were stored a cold lunch.

Times do change, and we believe, for the better.

WINTER CHEERLEADER

What living creature can match the optimism, ebullience, cheerfulness and enthusiasm of the chickadee? He's the gladhander and the backslapper of the bird world. He's the one who insists the north wind isn't really as sharp as yesterday, the apples are not as moldy as last year's, and the blue jays are not as obnoxious as the summer starlings. The chickadee praises the old peanut butter on the feeder, acclaims the sight of even soft sunflower seeds with joy, and is sure to be the one to point out that half a roof is better than none.

And he will be that way all winter, through blizzard and freeze, when water buckets are frozen or drifts cover seedpods. Maybe his constant cheerfulness gets to be obnoxious to other birds, but it's welcome for people.

If something so tiny and frail can not only survive our northern winters but actually be happy about them, why shouldn't insulated central-heating-system man be able to bear them?

SPRING HAS SPRUNG

Lindzen says what you and we thought was a perfectly miserable winter these last few months was really a great winter — from his standpoint. It was great, he says, because it had clear patterns, making it useful to those like himself who are interested in improving their ability to predict the weather.

Well, we wish him luck in predicting better weather for next winter. But he can have the last one. Grubbing out frozen gardenia bushes has confirmed all our dark thoughts about zero weather.

We mention all this not to remind you of past miseries but simply because as you read this all those miseries should be definitely in the past. It is time to rejoice, for at 11:43 a.m. this day spring arrives. We knew all the time it would — eventually.

No more dead auto batteries. No more frozen water pipes. No more snow to pelt your face. No more huge fuel bills and cold evenings huddled around the television set. No more expensive firewood to buy. Well, at least we hope all those things are true.

SHE WORKED FOR US ALL

When one thinks of Mississippi as it was a little more than a decade ago, one thinks of the oppression: Several civil rights workers were lynched practically in broad daylight, most Negroes could not vote and the rigid segregation of the races was the order of the day.

Of the many forces that came together to alter those conditions, none was more impressive than the poor black people them selves. They rose in righteous but peaceable anger and demanded to be free. And when thinking of them, it is impossible not to think of Fannie Lou Hamer, a stout stalwart sharecropper, born of that soil, who fought against all odds for a better tomorrow. She died recently near her Ruleville hemo at the age of 59 after suffering from diabetes, breast cancer and heart trouble.

The Mississippi Mrs. Hamer leaves behind is changed in great measure because of the strength and leadership she gave to sharecroppers like herself who earned subsistence wages under conditions that owed more to slavery than to the Declaration of Independence or the Bill of Rights. Indeed, it was their pursuit of happiness that threatened their lives time and again. Many of the outsiders who came to Mississippi to help those impoverished farmers either were well-known when they arrived or became famous in the process — Martin Luther King, Andrew J. Young Stokeley Carmichael and John Lewis, among others.

There was little fame and celebrity for the local blacks. They stayed on long after the celebrities left and finished the job as best they could, helping as Mrs. Hamer did to unify the Mississippi Democratic Party and working in other ways to heal their society and seek justice. Their names are mostly forgotten, but the image of Fannie Lou Hamer, her voice thunderous, pleading to be seated at the Democratic National Convention in 1964, will remain fixed for many of those who heard her simple, powerful eloquence. And anyone who ever heard Fannie Lou Hamer sing "O, Freedom," will have little difficulty remembering her.

She had been beaten and jailed many times, but she said she could not hate anybody "and hope to see God's face." Her special brand of courage, a courage equal to the demands of her time, is best summarized in the story of how she came to leave the plantation. She knew that if she continued her civil rights works, she would be thrown off and separated from her livelihood. She came to church one day and reported on the consequences of her persistence. "They kicked me off the plantation," she said. "They set me free. It's the best thing that could happen. Now I can work for my people." Except she worked for more than her people. She worked for all of us.

FIRE! FIRE!

A member of the local syndicate, recuperating from a gunshot wound, was wheelchairing down the hospital corridor when a fire extinguisher accidentally fell from its place on the wall and narrowly missed the wheelchair and its occupant. Thinking it was another attack by the hit man, the gangster started screaming for help and went wheeling down the corridor with all his might. A couple of orderlies, thinking the patient had gone perserk, took out after him. A passing nurse, who had snatched up the fallen fire extinguisher, decided that the patient had priority over hospital equipment, and not knowing if it was safe to toss aside the extinguisher, hung on to it and joined the chase.

The procession careened around a turn and almost ran down two elderly ladies on their way to visit sick friends.

Recovering from their sudden fright, the two stared after the fast-moving entourage.

"Now that's what I call fun!" exclaimed one of the old ladies, her eyes twinkling. "Outracing everybody in a wheelchair, yet!"

"That poor man isn't racing for fun, Sarah," the other said, awestruck. "Didn't you see the size of that needle the nurse was aiming at him?"

$64,000 IS TOO LOW

WASHINGTON— The news item that rocked America last week was that it now costs parents $64,000 to rear a child, including education at a state-supported university. A low-income family can rear one for $44,000 if you forget about his or her schooling.

According to Prof. Thomas J. Espenshade of Florida State University, this is a 60 percent increase over what it cost in 1969.

With all due respect to Prof. Espenshade, I think his figures are too low. While he threw in the usual things such as food, clothing, housing and education, I think he failed to take into consideration the following items:

--Automobile insurance for a teen-ager: $1,000 a year.

--Automobile insurance for the parents, when the company cancels everyone's policy because of the claims filed for the teen-ager's accidents: $3,000.

--Repairs to interior of the house after a party given by teen-ager for 50 of his or her "dearest" friends: $2,000.

--Food and drink dispensed to non-members of the family, who for one reason or another are always at the house: $6,000.

--Rug and furniture damage caused by teen-ager's untrained dog: $2,500.

--Rock concert tickets for children starting at age 11 and lasting until they get a job, which could be age 30: $3,800.

--Orthodontist bills for straightening teeth by braces: $2,000.

--Orthodontist bills for replacing braces that were accidentally lost on overnight camping trip: $1,200.

--Hi-fi equipment, absolutely essential to the peace of mind of a young person: $100 to $1,000, depending on whether child pays cash or uses family credit card.

--Birthday presents for friends who are having lavish parties their parents can't afford: $1,200.

--Birthday parties you give for your own children that you can't afford: $2,000.

--Collect telephone calls from children at camp, school or gas station on the highway, to find out why kids have not called collect in three weeks: $5,600.

--Unpaid tickets for illegal parking sent to parents because car is registered in their name: $780.

--Fines for library books overdue: $150.

--Cost of hiring someone to cut lawn because children don't have "time" to do it: $3,400.

--Football, baseball, hockey uniforms (now both male and female): $890.

--New clothes for Barbie and Ken dolls: $4,500.

--Gas and oil used for car pools for student and athletic activities: $3,000 (and expected to go higher).

--Records and tapes that children will die if they don't own: $4,700.

--Visits to hospital emergency rooms: $2,000.

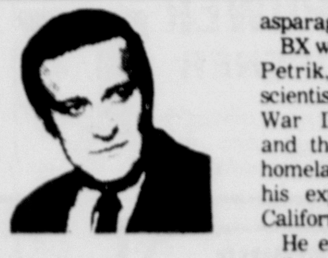
--School prom tickets, as well as rental of tuxedos for boys, purchase of dresses for girls and money to "go out after the dance": $600.

--Replacement of wine and booze stolen from liquor cabinet or closet by persons unknown: $1,500 to $5,000, depending on what kind of wine you keep and how well you hide the key to cabinet or closet.

--Miscellaneous items not covered in the study by Prof. Espenshade: legal fees for pot busts and arrests for disorderly conduct or sit-downs to protest building of nuclear energy plants; damage to neighbor's property done by your children; abortions; purchase of church or school raffle tickets your children have been unable to sell; parcel post packages; ski trips; remedial reading; Christmas. To be on the conservative side, we'll put down $8,780.

Prof. Espenshade did a good job, but I suspect he just didn't talk to the right people.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND



Microbiological Compounds Could Be the Answer

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON: Great quantities of the nation's dwindling oil and gas are poured inot the petro-chemical fertilizers that farmers spread on their fields. The chemicals wash into the streams, polluting scarce water supplies in the dry western states.

One evidence of the pollution is a coating of algae, which forms on lakes and rivers. So the enterprising petro-chemical companies are now offering "algaecides" to rid the water of the floating growth. Thus the companies create pollution and then cure it -- all through the magic of chemicals.

This heavy dosage of chemicals in the environment not only uses up precious oil and gas, but damages the soil and contaminates the waterways, in the opinion of environmental scientists. It is a deadly cycle that has been tolerated in order to nourish the nation's crops.

But now some agricultural experts believe that microbiological compounds may be better for the crops than chemical fertilizers. They claim these microbiological alternatives cost far less, save petroleum and replenish the soil.

A microbiological additive, called BX, has been used on test farms in the San Joaquin Valley. So we sent our reporter-at-large, Hal Bernton, into the California fields to check on the results.

He strolled through field after field of delicate asparagus in the low-lying delta outside Stockton. For years, these fields have been enriched with nitrogen fertilizers, with mixed results. The run-offs, for example, have polluted the river water used for irrigation.

Two years ago, farmer Bill Salamon grudgingly agreed to experiment with BX on an unproductive 20-acre field of asparagus. He is a friendly man, with a flamboyant golden moustache. Under a wide-brimmed white hat, he took Bernton on a tour of the experimental asparagus.

The harvest, he attested, surpassed anything the field had produced when it was treated with chemicals. He became so enthusiastic about BX that he has fertilized his entire asparagus crop and 300 arces of tomatoes this year with the microbiological product.

Bernton also gave the BX-nourished asparagus the ultimate test; he tasted them. He reported approvingly that they were the most tender, delicious asparagus he had ever eaten.

BX was developed by Vaclav Petrik, a thin, gray Czech scientist who survived a World War II concentration camp and the 1968 invasion of his homeland. He now putters over his experiments in a small California town.

He explained to us that the soil is the "stomach" of the plant, that healthy soil is filled with bacteria which transforms organic matter into the nutrients necessary for plant growth. The massive use of chemical fertilizers, fungicides and pesticides, he believes, has killed off many of these vital bacteria.

So Petrik began growing these bacteria in his laboratory. He has now mixed the bacteria into his BX formula which, he contends, restores the soil's natural vitality.

His experiments place the conscientious refugee scientist directly in the path of the mighty petro-chemical combines, whose salesmen are pressuring farmers to use more chemical fertilizers. The petrochemical industry has also had a cozy relationship with the citadel of agricultral research, the University of California at Davis.

One of the university's most distinguished researchers, Professor Roy Rauschklob, has refused to test BX at the university. "Based on my experience and knowledge of soil-plant-water relationships," he told us, "I do not see how it would be possible for this product to substitute for chemical fertilizers."

He added cautiously that microbiological additives can be helpful and that the university is pursuing its own lines of microbiological research.

The Agriculture Department and Environmental Protection Agency, meanwhile, are watching the microbiologial experiments closely. The government experts told us they are impressed with the preliminary results.

It remains to be seen, however, whether the refugee from Czechoslavakia will triumph over the powerful petro-chemical combines.

Pentagon Profits: Some of the nation's biggest defense contractors are trying to destroy a federal, finger-in-the-dike agency which monitors excess profits in Pentagon contracts.

For years, the Renegotiation Board dodged its responsibility to squeeze some of the inflated profits out of military contracts. All but one of its members, Goodwin Chase, seemed unconcerned about military profiteering.

Now President Carter has named Chase to head the board and has appointed other members who support his views. This has caused panic in the executive suites of the big defense contractors.

Suddenly, a deluge of letters has hit Capitol Hill from such powerful corporations as Litton, Tenneco, Bendix, U.S. Gypsum, Honeywell, Hewlett-Packard, TRW, Standard Oil of California, U.S. Steel, Upjohn and Boeing.

We have obtained the battle plans incidentally of a Chamber of Commerce campaign for fighting the reinvigorated Renegotiation Board. The plans call for letters to Senate and House members to influence their votes.

The corporate pressure, unfortunately, has had its effect. Despite the board's potential for saving billions of dollars, its supporters believe they have only a 50-50 chance of saving the board from being detoothed.

Tie-less in Politics:
Black leaders charge White House Chief of Staff Jordan with political bias

WASHINGTON— Sartorially and politically, the 32-year-old White House chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, wears no ties. His intimates say he owes nothing to anyone. And will tell you so.

And the black leaders here, up and down the Hill, say he has been sending them unsubtle signals that he owes them even less.

Congressional Black Caucus members, some of whom say they've been slapped in the face by Jimmy Carter's refusal to see them, and some of whom say the insult is as searing as any to which they've been subjected, charge the shoulder-shrugging Jordan with keeping the 16-member coalition on an enemies list.

In the next few weeks, this black anger may break out publicly when they test his power. The veteran Jordan knows it.

But few, indeed, bypass him inside the White House. Appointments secretary to the President, Tim Kraft, reports to Jordan. There's no game plan yet on whom Jordan consults before he sees the President. Obviously no one.

It was Kraft who brushed off the Congressional Black Caucus on March 23 with a the-President-will-try-to-see-you-sometime letter when the CBC sought an appointment specifically to discuss the heavily-amended Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill.

No one this minute wants to joust openly with a powerful White House chief of staff. But there are caucus leaders who are beginning to talk for background.

"Hamilton Jordan just simply believes that neither he nor the President need to touch base with the caucus," one black official said. "It springs out of the lateness of some of our people getting on board the Carter primary special, away back then.

"When Tim Kraft wrote that letter to us, he first consulted Hamilton Jordan. So we were brushed off. What we are seeing here is an unwritten White House policy of 'put them on the back burner.' That's what we're hearing from the White House in general and the Jordan office in particular."

Actually this source was tougher with Jordan than the authorized quote implies. The source added that with few exceptions, both Jordan and the Democratic National Committee, which he controls, are scuffing as well as snubbing the blacks. Placing few of them in authoritative positions. Actual tokenism.

"You know all about affirmative action," I was told. "Well, take a look at the racial composition of Jordan's staff. In affirmative action, they call such a survey a 'utilization study.' Take a look. American Motors may be leaving U.S. car market

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. is losing its struggle to stay in the car-making business with the Big Three.

The consensus among some two dozen industry insiders and analysts interviewed by The Associated Press is that AMC is likely to abandon the American car market before the decade is out.

That doesn't mean it will close its doors. Rather, AMC is expected to lop off its car operations so nonautomotive activities — which now account for more than half the business — can flourish.

AMC was able to hang in the market as a small-car specialist while the other U.S. makers were building big cars. But the energy crisis and federal fuel economy laws have made the Big Three small-car specialists, too. And, with superior financial resources, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler can outdo AMC with newer, more innovative and more fuel-efficient models.

Most of those interviewed believe President Carter's plan to tax gas-guzzlers and give rebates on fuel-stingy models will hasten the demise of AMC as a car producer because it will accelerate the Big Three's development of new generations of small cars.

The possibility of government aid for AMC to keep the car industry competitive has diminished since new competition has come with Volkswagen setting up a U.S. assembly operation and the likelihood that several Japanese makers soon may do the same.

AMC Chairman Roy D. Chapin Jr. adamantly disputes suggestions his firm will drop out of the car market.

"We're been through this so many times before," Chapin said in an interview Friday. "Who knows what's really going to happen?

"We're suffering, but we've pulled through before. We see greater opportunities in the '80s than ever before in our history. We just have to be smart enough to make it happen."

But the numbers are disconcerting:

—U.S. car sales are off for a third consecutive year, to 64,000 through April — less than half what they were in 1974.

—AMC's market share is under 1.8 per cent, the smallest since the company was formed more than two decades ago.

—Four imports are outselling AMC. Toyota has the largest share of the market through April, 4.2 per cent. The others are Datsun, Volkswagen and Honda.

—AMC built more Jeeps, buses and trucks — 56,600 — through April than it did cars, which are off 36 per cent from 1976 to 54,750.

—After losing $74 million in 1975 and 1976, AMC earned $3.7 million in the first half of fiscal 1977, thanks to profitable nonauto operations and the sale of a stamping plant to VW. By contrast, Big Three earnings in just the first three months of 1977 were $903 million by GM, $483 million by Ford, $75 million by Chrysler.

"I think we'll be out of the car business in a year," said one middle-level AMC executive. "Our sales are lousy."

An official at another maker added: "These guys must be at the ragged edge. Something dramatic would have to happen for them to hang in for another year, but I don't know what."

Top auto executives rarely talk publicly about a competitor's problems. Recently, though, GM Chairman Thomas Murphy was asked if he was concerned AMC would "be buried." He replied:

"It does concern me, because I never like to see anybody in difficulty ... We try to appeal to customers. And if we can't, for whatever the reason, and the customer is not interested in our merchandize, I don't think we should have a license that somebody says 'I've just got to keep you in business, and I'll give you money, or whatever, in order to do it.'"

Recently, there has been a spate of rumors AMC would be bought out by firms ranging from the Houston-based conglomerate Tenneco to a group of dissident AMC dealers.

AMC has denied all the reports. But they persist, an indication of the firm's troubles, which likely will mount this fall when Chrysler introduces a front-wheel drive subcompact and Ford brings out new compacts. In 1979, GM will debut new front-wheel drive compacts.

"(These cars) should all be more desirable than anything AMC now makes or is likely to develop considering its inadequate financial resources," said an analyst for a major New York investment house.

"If AMC can't make much money in a 1977 boom, what happens in the next recession?" said the analyst, who forecasts a 1979 decline. "AMC is very likely to become the Jeep Manufacturing Co. of Toledo, Ohio (where the Jeep company is located)."

AMC was born in 1954 out of the ashes of Nash-Kelvinator and Hudson. It almost died in infancy. But in 1958, then company president George Romney took a bold gamble. While the other firms were building cars bigger, he took AMC out of that market, and — with a slap at "gas-guzzling dinosaurs" — brought out a compact-sized Rambler.

Romney's gamble paid off handsomely. AMC's market share, which was mired at less than 2 per cent, jumped to 4 per cent in 1958.

Riding its unique reputation as the industry's small-car specialist, AMC held a 5 to 6 per cent share until 1965. When Studebaker-Packard folded in the early '60s, the industry had shaken out from more than 2,000 entrants six decades earlier to the Big Three and little AMC.

In the past decade, though, AMC has been unable to get more than 4 per cent of the market due to increased competition from other domestic compacts and subcompacts and low-priced imports. AMC did well in 1974, when the Arab oil embargo created a demand for small cars the Big Three could not meet immediately. But as soon as they stepped up small-car capacity, AMC sales slid.

If Carter's auto tax-rebate plan passes, it won't necessarily help AMC, because the firm's cars are not fuel-efficient compared with other cars in the same class.

AMC's subcompact Gremlin, for example, would get a maximum rebate of $251 in 1978, based on current mileage figures, while a Chevrolet Chevette would get the maximum $473 rebate, and the Ford Pinto a maximum $359. Similarly, AMC's Pacer would qualify for a maximum $89 rebate, while a Ford Granada would get up to $224 and the restyled Oldsmobile Cutlass an estimated $163.

The Pacer, the only totally new car AMC has introduced in the seven years since the Gremlin debuted, received high marks for engineering and styling when it was brought out in 1975. Many industry observers thought it would be AMC's short-term savior. But after a brisk start, sales have been poor. No one is sure why.

AMC improved the Gremlin's fuel economy for 1977 with the purchase of a four-cylinder engine from Volkswagen to replace a less efficient six-cylinder engine.

But analysts say AMC ultimately would have to revamp all its cars — make them smaller, lighter, more fuel-efficient and fresher looking — as the Big Three are doing to stay competitive. AMC's plans through 1979 call for some restyling of its current models, but nothing new.

The cost of bringing out an entirely new car is staggering, hundreds of millions of dollars, and AMC doesn't have that kind of capital.

When AMC has invested in the past decade, much of the money has gone toward expansion in the nonautomotive field. In 1970, the firm picked up Kaiser-Jeep, AMC's brightest performer. The next year AMC entered the bus, postal vehicle and military truck business by forming AM General. In recent years, AMC has purchased an electrical component company and a lawn-garden tractor maker, and built new headquarters — a high-rise office tower in suburban Southfield.

In fiscal 1976, the firm had record sales of $2.3 billion — putting it in the top 100 among industrial corporations. Employment is 30,000, with about half working at car plants in Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis., and Brampton, Ont.

American Motors may be leaving U.S. car market

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. is losing its struggle to stay in the car-making business with the Big Three.

The consensus among some two dozen industry insiders and analysts interviewed by The Associated Press is that AMC is likely to abandon the American car market before the decade is out.

That doesn't mean it will close its doors. Rather, AMC is expected to lop off its car operations so nonautomotive activities — which now account for more than half the business — can flourish.

AMC was able to hang in the market as a small-car specialist while the other U.S. makers were building big cars. But the energy crisis and federal fuel economy laws have made the Big Three small-car specialists, too. And, with superior financial resources, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler can outdo AMC with newer, more innovative and more fuel-efficient models.

Most of those interviewed believe President Carter's plan to tax gas-guzzlers and give rebates on fuel-stingy models will hasten the demise of AMC as a car producer because it will accelerate the Big Three's development of new generations of small cars.

The possibility of government aid for AMC to keep the car industry competitive has diminished since new competition has come with Volkswagen setting up a U.S. assembly operation and the likelihood that several Japanese makers soon may do the same.

AMC Chairman Roy D. Chapin Jr. adamantly disputes suggestions his firm will drop out of the car market.

"We're been through this so many times before," Chapin said in an interview Friday. "Who knows what's really going to happen?

"We're suffering, but we've pulled through before. We see greater opportunities in the '80s than ever before in our history. We just have to be smart enough to make it happen."

But the numbers are disconcerting:

—U.S. car sales are off for a third consecutive year, to 64,000 through April — less than half what they were in 1974.

—AMC's market share is under 1.8 per cent, the smallest since the company was formed more than two decades ago.

—Four imports are outselling AMC. Toyota has the largest share of the market through April, 4.2 per cent. The others are Datsun, Volkswagen and Honda.

—AMC built more Jeeps, buses and trucks — 56,600 — through April than it did cars, which are off 36 per cent from 1976 to 54,750.

—After losing $74 million in 1975 and 1976, AMC earned $3.7 million in the first half of fiscal 1977, thanks to profitable nonauto operations and the sale of a stamping plant to VW. By contrast, Big Three earnings in just the first three months of 1977 were $903 million by GM, $483 million by Ford, $75 million by Chrysler.

"I think we'll be out of the car business in a year," said one middle-level AMC executive. "Our sales are lousy."

An official at another maker added: "These guys must be at the ragged edge. Something dramatic would have to happen for them to hang in for another year, but I don't know what."

Top auto executives rarely talk publicly about a competitor's problems. Recently, though, GM Chairman Thomas Murphy was asked if he was concerned AMC would "be buried." He replied:

"It does concern me, because I never like to see anybody in difficulty ... We try to appeal to customers. And if we can't, for whatever the reason, and the customer is not interested in our merchandize, I don't think we should have a license that somebody says 'I've just got to keep you in business, and I'll give you money, or whatever, in order to do it.'"

Recently, there has been a spate of rumors AMC would be bought out by firms ranging from the Houston-based conglomerate Tenneco to a group of dissident AMC dealers.

Company executives raised to new Big K posts

NASHVILLE — The Board of Directors of Kuhn's Big-K Stores Corp., a leading Southeastern retailer based here, recentlyy announced the election of Jack W. Kuhn to chairman of the board and chief executive officer, and Gus D. Kuhn, Jr., to president. At the same time, the company's board reported the elevation of four other key executives to new posts.

Announcement of the major management promotions followed the Company's Board of Directors meeting this afternoon in which Jack Kuhn was promoted from president and Gus D. Kuhn, Jr., from vice president. Jack Kuhn has served as president of the company since 1964, while Gus Kuhn has been vice president since 1948.

Other executives elevated today included Gilbert S. Fox, from vice president, secretary to executive vice president, secretary; Carl L. Goldstein, from vice president, treasurer to executive vice president and chief financial officer; A. Faison Adams, from director of store operations to vice president, store operations; and Donald M. Israel, from controller to treasurer, controller and assistant secretary.

"The promotion of these individuals marks a major milestone in the company's efforts to broaden our executive base," Jack and Gus Kuhn explained. 'For the first time in the company's history, we have promoted individuals from outside our family to key positions of responsibility."

In another development, Jack Kuhn told stockholders at the company's annual meeting this morning that net sales for the first quarter ending April 29, 1977, rose 9.9 percent from $45,132,758 for the three-month period ending April 30, 1976, to $49,604,016. Net income for the quarter just ended was $375,000, or 13 per cent share, compared to $413,000, or 15 cents per share, for the comparable period a year ago.

"Our profit margins in the first quarter of the current fiscal year were affected by an unusually cold winter," Kuhn pointed out. "The severe winter weather, coupled with the reciprocal negative effects of an energy shortage and temporarily higher than normal unemployment in the areas we serve, had an adverse impact on our profit margins."

Kuhn said that for the "remainder of the company's 1978 fiscal year, we remain confident that sales will improve. We also are optimistic for an improvement in net income, although we expect some impact from interest expenses on the construction loan for our new corporate- distribution center, as well as expenses from our employee health care program and management compensation program."

At the regular directors' meeting today, the board announced a 50 per cent increase in the regular quarterly cash dividend from 2 and one half cents pershare to 3 and three-fourths cents per share, which is equivalent to 15 cents per share annually. This marks the second 50 per cent increase in the cash dividend during the past year. The dividend is payable June 3, 1977, to stockholders of record May 20, 1977.

At the annual meeting this morning, stockholders re-elected the company's slate of directors, including Jack W. Kuhn, Gus D. Kuhn, Jr., Gilbert S. Fox, Carl L. Goldstein, Simon S. Weil, William W. Berry, and William F. Earthman.

Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. presently operates 78 Big K discount department stores, 24 Kuhn's Variety stores and a Bargain Center. The company has its operations in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri and Tennessee.

339,709 fly Ozark in April

Ozark Air Lines boarded 339,709 passengers, including charters, during April. This marked a 6 percent increase over boardings of 319,155 passengers during April, 1976, according to Edward J. Crane, president and chief executive officer.

Boardings for the first four months of 1977 were 1,314,107, a nine percent increase over boardings of 1,209,190 during the same period last year.

Revenue passenger miles during April totaled 111,266,000, increasing 13 percent over 98,854,000 during the same month last year. Available seat miles equaled 214,085,000, up 14 percent over 187,976,000 in April, 1976.

During the first four months of the year, revenue passenger miles increased 15 percent to 430,155,000. During the same period in 1976, revenue passenger miles were 374,675,000. Available seat miles totaled 836,859,000 during the January-April period, showing a 16 percent increase over 724,078,000 during the same time last year.

The load factor for April was 52 percent, a one percent decrease from April, 1976. Year-to-date figures show a 51 percent load factor, a decrease of one percent form the same time last year.

Investors watching IBM stock closely

BY CROCKETT SCOTT

IBM watchers say this most famous of all growth stock's continuing decline on the New York Stock Exchange is a bear signal you cannot buck—successfully.

"Wait until IBM touches bottom," they counsel; "then, maybe it will be time to think about coming back into the market."

An equity into which the institutions bought heavily in years gone by—and which many of them have continued to hold, according to the investment banking fraternity—IBM's image becomes more tarnished daily.

SEC registered security analysts do not question the stock's quality, but more and more of them are suggesting that it was probably very much overpriced.

A St. Louis investment banker reminds that IBM stood up well, until recent weeks; while many other growth stocks slipped into tailspins immediately following Jimmy Carter's election.

An often quoted stockbroker, Robert J. Ferrell is reported in the current issue to The Market Chronicle as saying the "IBM's weakness is the big event because in the top tier growth area it is the 'stock of stocks'. The one most holders of growth issues use for benchmark purposes to compare the price—earnings multiples. multiples, yield, dividend growth, and the like growth stocks."

Mr. Farrell emphasizes the depressing effect of IBM's slide on the rest of the market; noting that it probably was precipitated by IBM's first quarter report which showed a decline in earnings.

He notes that: "Compounding the significance of the IBM weakness is the fact that many holders refused to sell at a price almost 10 percent higher than when the company asked for tenders two months ago. It was clear from this that the majority (the 'experts' who manage the institutions portfolios) consideered IBM the best stock to hold.

"Therefore, what happens to IBM has to have a profound effect on investor psychology and attitudes towards other growth stocks as well."

The long term bear market for so-called "over-owned" growth (the disenchantment ahs been a long time coming) stocks still has a way to go, suggests Mr. Ferrell.

"We have compared the growth stock bear cycle of 1972 to the present day with the Value Line Bear Cycle of 1968-1974. The correlation, so far, is almost perfect.

"The common denominator in all bear markets is the psychologh surrounding the stocks, not their quality," Mr. Farrell noted.

High multiple stocks, he indicated stimulate excessive purchases in a bull market and soar way beyond even future valve. The same is true in reverse, he suggested. "They can be expected to go to relative undervaluation extremes at bottoms."

The Market Chronicle mentions that research into the identity of holders of IBM stock reveals that banks are owners of big portions of the equity. The banks, notes The Chronicle, are the people who have held onto the "Favorite Fifty" up until the last bear market.

So what is the current strategy? Some SEC registered analysts hint that when the banks begin to sell IBM a storm very possibly is at hand. For if IBM is dumped in large quantities, ther could be a big sell-off in the market generally;—and consequently there should be some bargains.

For those longing for some direction this may be the missing ingredient, notwithstanding there will be some paper losses converted to the real thing.

Stockbroker Farrell mentions that "what is needed to make a bottom is reason to be bearish and an excuse to finally give up and sell. We think such a point is finally being approached.

Company executives raised to new Big K posts

NASHVILLE — The Board of Directors of Kuhn's Big-K Stores Corp., a leading Southeastern retailer based here, recentlyy announced the election of Jack W. Kuhn to chairman of the board and chief executive officer, and Gus D. Kuhn, Jr., to president. At the same time, the company's board reported the elevation of four other key executives to new posts.

Announcement of the major management promotions followed the Company's Board of Directors meeting this afternoon in which Jack Kuhn was promoted from president and Gus D. Kuhn, Jr., from vice president. Jack Kuhn has served as president of the company since 1964, while Gus Kuhn has been vice president since 1948.

Other executives elevated today included Gilbert S. Fox, from vice president, secretary to executive vice president, secretary; Carl L. Goldstein, from vice president, treasurer to executive vice president and chief financial officer; A. Faison Adams, from director of store operations to vice president, store operations; and Donald M. Israel, from controller to treasurer, controller and assistant secretary.

"The promotion of these individuals marks a major milestone in the company's efforts to broaden our executive base," Jack and Gus Kuhn explained. 'For the first time in the company's history, we have promoted individuals from outside our family to key positions of responsibility."

In another development, Jack Kuhn told stockholders at the company's annual meeting this morning that net sales for the first quarter ending April 29, 1977, rose 9.9 percent from $45,132,758 for the three-month period ending April 30, 1976, to $49,604,016. Net income for the quarter just ended was $375,000, or 13 per cent share, compared to $413,000, or 15 cents per share, for the comparable period a year ago.

"Our profit margins in the first quarter of the current fiscal year were affected by an unusually cold winter," Kuhn pointed out. "The severe winter weather, coupled with the reciprocal negative effects of an energy shortage and temporarily higher than normal unemployment in the areas we serve, had an adverse impact on our profit margins."

Kuhn said that for the "remainder of the company's 1978 fiscal year, we remain confident that sales will improve. We also are optimistic for an improvement in net income, although we expect some impact from interest expenses on the construction loan for our new corporate- distribution center, as well as expenses from our employee health care program and management compensation program."

At the regular directors' meeting today, the board announced a 50 per cent increase in the regular quarterly cash dividend from 2 and one half cents pershare to 3 and three-fourths cents per share, which is equivalent to 15 cents per share annually. This marks the second 50 per cent increase in the cash dividend during the past year. The dividend is payable June 3, 1977, to stockholders of record May 20, 1977.

At the annual meeting this morning, stockholders re-elected the company's slate of directors, including Jack W. Kuhn, Gus D. Kuhn, Jr., Gilbert S. Fox, Carl L. Goldstein, Simon S. Weil, William W. Berry, and William F. Earthman.

Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. presently operates 78 Big K discount department stores, 24 Kuhn's Variety stores and a Bargain Center. The company has its operations in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri and Tennessee.

339,709 fly Ozark in April

Ozark Air Lines boarded 339,709 passengers, including charters, during April. This marked a 6 percent increase over boardings of 319,155 passengers during April, 1976, according to Edward J. Crane, president and chief executive officer.

Boardings for the first four months of 1977 were 1,314,107, a nine percent increase over boardings of 1,209,190 during the same period last year.

Revenue passenger miles during April totaled 111,266,000, increasing 13 percent over 98,854,000 during the same month last year. Available seat miles equaled 214,085,000, up 14 percent over 187,976,000 in April, 1976.

During the first four months of the year, revenue passenger miles increased 15 percent to 430,155,000. During the same period in 1976, revenue passenger miles were 374,675,000. Available seat miles totaled 836,859,000 during the January-April period, showing a 16 percent increase over 724,078,000 during the same time last year.

The load factor for April was 52 percent, a one percent decrease from April, 1976. Year-to-date figures show a 51 percent load factor, a decrease of one percent form the same time last year.

Investors watching IBM stock closely

BY CROCKETT SCOTT

IBM watchers say this most famous of all growth stock's continuing decline on the New York Stock Exchange is a bear signal you cannot buck—successfully.

"Wait until IBM touches bottom," they counsel; "then, maybe it will be time to think about coming back into the market."

An equity into which the institutions bought heavily in years gone by—and which many of them have continued to hold, according to the investment banking fraternity—IBM's image becomes more tarnished daily.

SEC registered security analysts do not question the stock's quality, but more and more of them are suggesting that it was probably very much overpriced.

A St. Louis investment banker reminds that IBM stood up well, until recent weeks; while many other growth stocks slipped into tailspins immediately following Jimmy Carter's election.

An often quoted stockbroker, Robert J. Ferrell is reported in the current issue to The Market Chronicle as saying the "IBM's weakness is the big event because in the top tier growth area it is the 'stock of stocks'. The one most holders of growth issues use tor benchmark purposes to compare the price—earnings multiples. multiples, yield, dividend growth, and the like growth stocks."

Mr. Farrell emphasizes the depressing effect of IBM's slide on the rest of the market; noting that it probably was precipitated by IBM's first quarter report which showed a decline in earnings.

He notes that: "Compounding the significance of the IBM weakness is the fact that many holders refused to sell at a price almost 10 percent higher than when the company asked for tenders two months ago. It was clear from this that the majority (the 'experts' who manage the institutions portfolios) consideered IBM the best stock to hold.

"Therefore, what happens to IBM has to have a profound effect on investor psychology and attitudes towards other growth stocks as well."

The long term bear market for so-called "over-owned" growth (the disenchantment ahs been a long time coming) stocks still has a way to go, suggests Mr. Ferrell.

"We have compared the growth stock bear cycle of 1972 to the present day with the Value Line Bear Cycle of 1968-1974. The correlation, so far, is almost perfect.

"The common denominator in all bear markets is the psychologh surrounding the stocks, not their quality," Mr. Farrell noted.

High multiple stocks, he indicated stimulate excessive purchases in a bull market and soar way beyond even future valve. The same is true in reverse, he suggested. "They can be expected to go to relative undervaluation extremes at bottoms."

The Market Chronicle mentions that research into the identity of holders of IBM stock reveals that banks are owners of big portions of the equity. The banks, notes The Chronicle, are the people who have held onto the "Favorite Fifty" up until the last bear market.

So what is the current strategy? Some SEC registered analysts hint that when the banks begin to sell IBM a storm very possibly is at hand. For if IBM is dumped in large quantities, ther could be a big sell-off in the market generally;—and consequently there should be some bargains.

For those longing for some direction this may be the missing ingredient, notwithstanding there will be some paper losses converted to the real thing.

Stockbroker Farrell mentions that "what is needed to make a bottom is reason to be bearish and an excuse to finally give up and sell. We think such a point is finally being approached.

Mr. Farrell speaks of the possibility of a 20 percent decline in many of the growth stocks.

Divorce: Contagious or preventive?

Illustration by

Richard Howard

Feature by Jill S. Corti

By Jill Corti

Recently in a popular women's magazine an article appeared entitled "Is divorce contagious?". The article discussed the pros and cons of divorce in 1977 and how the number of divorces have increased in the past few years.

Ron Steinmetz, a psychiatric social worker, and Vernon Westrich, a clinical psychologist, of the Tri County Counseling Center, 400 N. Main, both agree that divorce is not contagious. Contagious meaning a person couldn't help what happened.

Westrich feels that as a whole "we can't deny there has been an increase in the last 10 to 15 years and it's largely due to the fact that there is a choice rather than a divorce just happening."

He also feels that the coming age of women's rights, the right to realize they (women) can make a choice of marriage or career. Women now have the opportunities available to them rather than just marriage for a future.

Steinmetz feels that, true, women now have a freer choice because there are more opportunities opened for them, but also a woman now feels that she no longer has to be trapped in an unhappy situation.

Westrich's reply to this, was, "marriage isn't the only way for a woman to be successful, after divorce she now can look for a career. Ten to fifteen years ago if she was divorced, then she was considered unsuccessful.

"Two people contemplate marriage, but, often can't be objective with one another" Steinmetz cited this and other reasons for divorce.

"Often times, he continued, a couple looks to marriage as things they have in common, then, as years go by they see that their two paths aren't being brought together, neither see that they need to meet the other partners change and so they look to the only resort they can see - divorce.

Another reason for divorce, often times is early marriages.

Steinmetz see that early marriages fail so much of the time because of "change." "Change" meaning what the couple had in common at 17 compared to at age 33.

Goals are not often organized when marriage is talked about as teenagers and thus become a problem in later years.

Other problems dealt with most often in divorce cases are those of finances and sexual relationships.

Westrich commented that finances involves a majority of break ups. "A couple can sometimes stand the pressure of one of the pair running around on one another more than they can stand the stress of bills and creditors.

"Sexual problems," according to Steinmetz, "are a matter of taking each other for granted."

Little or no respect or kindness shown in marriages today along with the middle aged man who sees himself as getting old are other marital problems. Sometimes the older man will see outside sexual activities as an ego booster.

Steinmetz commented that a lot of couples sometimes seek counseling. "Marital counseling is done to see how their needs have not been met by the other and how these needs can be met by the other in their relationship," he added.

Westrich says that often times "we don't try to help them reconsider but, whatever it is to make both lives happy."

As far as contagious, Steinmetz said, neighborhoods as a whole are important in building a weak marriage into a good one. Often times struggling marriages can gather strength from other's good marriages.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Sikeston, says he often counsels divorced persons or couples on the verge of getting a divorce.

Fulbright cited finances, not having the ability to communicate and how couples forget to court one another as three main problems.

He said many couples will often not be able to budget themselves and overspend causing trouble among the pair. The man not wishing to talk about it, the woman not understanding.

For the communications problem, Fulbright said that the man's masculinity, not being able to show emotion such as tears and the woman with an inferiority complex often puts them on a level where they may be hurt easily.

"Couple's forget how to court one another," he added, "What a shame, they forget how to treat one another, how to love one another and most of all how to do things together."

What happens to children involved in divorces? How do they react?

"Children can adjust. They do need two things," Steinmetz added, "security and consistency."

Divorce upsets the need of security and consistency, but in some ways, if the couple has been argumentive they (the children) haven't had this need fulfilled. Staying together for the children isn't always good, he concluded.

More often, it is harder for a teenager to deal with his parents marriage break-up than it is for the younger child. This is true, because, the teenager looks to his parents as a model.

"Visiting rights for both teenagers and younger children should be done," according to Steimentz," at a consistent basis so that the child c[illegible] anticipate seeing either parent."

Visiting rights should [illegible] special events.

Westrich added to Steinmetz comments by saying that the visiting rights should not be parents competing against one another but a time of sharing.

Divorce has become easy to obtain with the help of the 3 year old No Fault Divorce law, but, often won't leave the impression as such.

A large per cent that go through the process of moving out after a divorce, leaves one with the feeling much like that of death. This is especially true for the one who really didn't want the divorce to start with.

Very often, too, it will add an extra stress upon the wife who has never had to pay bills or worry over home repairs. It is also an extra stress of finding another place to live for the husband.

How to fit in with old friends is always another problem for the divorced couple.

Will the friends accept one or both of us or will we be screened?

Prevention of divorce, especially for the early marriages, can be the premarital programs offered at the area churches and also the Tri County Counseling Center.

Although the number of divorces in the Bootheel are much lower than in the St. Louis or other metropolitan areas, it seems to be a rapidly growing "way of life".

The divorced persons fight in the community

By The Rev. Dr. Arthur Fulbright

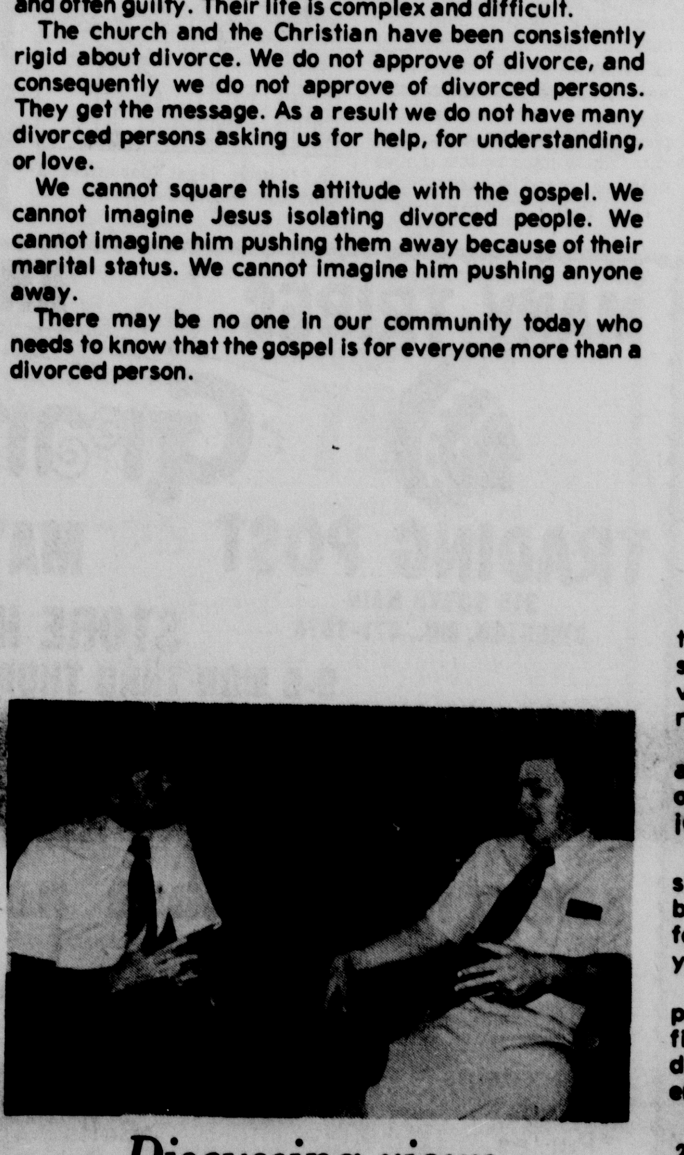
Church members have a profound dilemma about the divorced person. The church has traditionally been a bulwark for monogamy, and no institution has fought divorce as successfully as the church. There is strong biblical evidence for monogamy till death do us part. This biblical ideal is supported by practical experience. Divorce is always painful, and the dissolution of family life is destructive to persons and nations.

In our zeal to preserve marriage till death, we have pushed the divorced person to the outer edge of our love. Divorce is a fact of life. There are millions in our society who are divorced. They are hurt and lonely. Confused and often guilty. Their life is complex and difficult.

The church and the Christian have been consistently rigid about divorce. We do not approve of divorce, and consequently we do not approve of divorced persons. They get the message. As a result we do not have many divorced persons asking us for help, for understanding, or love.

We cannot square this attitude with the gospel. We cannot imagine Jesus isolating divorced people. We cannot imagine him pushing them away because of their marital status. We cannot imagine him pushing anyone away.

There may be no one in our community today who needs to know that the gospel is for everyone more than a divorced person.



Discussing views

Ron Steinmetz, left, a psychiatric social worker and Vernon Westrich, right, a clinical psychologist at Tri County Counseling Center, 400 N. Main, discuss the pros and cons of divorce and what happens to the family as a whole when a divorce happens.

The 70's bring change in lifestyles

WASHINGTON — Americans in the 1970s changed their views on marriage, divorce, childbearing and other social institutions to the point where their lifestyles are vastly different from earlier generations, a government report indicated recently.

The Census Bureau said marriage and childbearing are being delayed or avoided more than ever, divorce is on the upsurge and an increasing number of women hold jobs or attend school.

The report, based on studies conducted last year, showed the divorce rate made its largest leap ever between 1970 and 1976. There were 75 divorced persons for every 1,000 married persons in the United States last year. In 1970, the ratio was only 47 per 1,000.

The bureau estimated about one-third of all married persons between 25 and 35 "may eventually end their first marriage in divorce." About 40 per cent of those who divorce and remarry may have their second marriage end in divorce too.

The Censsu Census Bureau said the proportion of 20- to 24-year-old women who never marry increased from 28 per cent in 1960 to 36 per cent in 1970 to 43 per cent in 1976.

In the 25- to 29-age group, remarried women were 15 per cent of the total female population, up from 10.5 per cent in 1970, the study said.

The birthrate, dropping steadily since the Korean War, continued downward considerably in the 1970s.

"The increase in childlessness . . . presumably reflects, in part, the changing attitudes of young wives toward early childbearing and the pursuit of their own career goals," the study noted.

According to the study, almost half — 42 per cent — of all married women 20 to 24 years of age have no children compared with 36 per cent in 1970 and 24 per cent in 1960.

In the 25- to 29-age bracket, 22 per cent of all married women are childless, an increase of nearly 6 per cent from 1970.

The report also said:

.Nursery and elementary schools are losing enrollments fast, but college enrollments jumped 34 per cent in the first 6 years of the decade.

.One-fourth of all college students last year were 25 or older.

.College enrollment of women between 25 and 34 was 971,000 last year, more than double the 1970 level.

.Nearly 11 per cent of the nation's population of 216 million is 65 or older and the median age of Americans has increased from 27.9 years to 29 years during this decade.

.There are about 5 million more females than males in the overall population.

.Twice as many unmarried couples, an estimated 1.3 million people, were living together in 1976 as were in 1970. Also the number of families headed by a woman with no husband present increased by one-third during the period.

.Almost half the women age 16 and over are in the labor force, compared to 43 per cent in 1970 and 38 per cent in 1960. At the same time, 78 per cent of men age 16 and over were in the labor force in 1976, compared with 80 per cent in 1970 and 83 per cent in 1960.

The largest numerical population increases were in Florida which grew by 1.5 million and Texas which grew by 1.3 million.

Also, the figures show that the black population in the suburbs has been increasing faster than the white population there. It increased on an annual rate of about 5.2 per cent for blacks and about 1.4 per cent for whites.

Divorce: Contagious or preventive?

By Jill Corti

Recently in a popular women's magazine an article appeared entitled "Is divorce contagious?". The article discussed the pros and cons of divorce in 1977 and how the number of divorces have increased in the past few years.

Ron Steinmetz, a psychiatric social worker, and Vernon Westrich, a clinical psychologist, of the Tri County Counseling Center, 400 N. Main, both agree that divorce is not contagious. Contagious meaning a person couldn't help what happened.

Westrich feels that as a whole "we can't deny there has been an increase in the last 10 to 15 years and it's largely due to the fact that there is a choice rather than a divorce just happening."

He also feels that the coming age of women's rights, the right to realize they (women) can make a choice of marriage or career. Women now have the opportunities available to them rather than just marriage for a future.

Steinmetz feels that, true, women now have a freer choice because there are more opportunities opened for them, but also a woman now feels that she no longer has to be trapped in an unhappy situation.

Westrich's reply to this, was, "marriage isn't the only way for a woman to be successful, after divorce she now can look for a career. Ten to fifteen years ago if she was divorced, then she was considered unsuccessful.

"Two people contemplate marriage, but, often can't be objective with one another" Steinmetz cited this and other reasons for divorce.

"Often times, he continued, a couple looks to marriage as things they have in common, then, as years go by they see that their two paths aren't being brought together, neither see that they need to meet the other partners change and so they look to the only resort they can see - divorce.

Another reason for divorce, often times is early marriages.

Steinmetz see that early marriages fail so much of the time because of "change." "Change" meaning what the couple had in common at 17 compared to at age 33.

Goals are not often organized when marriage is talked about as teenagers and thus become a problem in later years.

"Visiting rights for both teenagers and younger children should be done," according to Steimentz," at a consistent basis so that the child can be certain of and anticipate seeing either parent.

Visiting rights should also be flexable in the area of special events.

Westrich added to Steinmetz comments by saying that the visiting rights should not be parents competing against one another but a time of sharing.

Divorce has become easy to obtain with the help of the 3 year old No Fault Divorce law, but, often won't leave the impression as such.

Spend more time with your children today

By Erma Bombeck

"We should spend more time with the children," I told my husband the other day. "In a few years they'll be gone and we'll rattle around in this empty house wishing we had taken the time to sit down and find out how they felt about things... their hopes... their ambitions... what are you smiling about?"

"I'm still back at the part on rattling around in the house. Do you know I shaved the other morning without steam on the mirror and nearly scared myself to death?"

"Children need the companionship of an adult," I continued. "That very special relationship in the formative years where you listen to one another, advise, assess, mold values, exchange ideas and points of view. We don't even know how they feel about life."

"Get on with it. What are you suggesting?"

"You should take your son fishing and I'll have the weekend here alone with our daughter. That way it's a one-on-one situation where we really get into the meaningful stuff."

Last week, as I watched father and son load up all the gear into the four-wheel drive, a lump came into my throat. When they left the driveway, I called to my daughter.

"Whatya want? I'm on the phone."

She was on the phone for more than five hours.

As she was showering, I feel to my knees and yelled under the door, "Do you want to talk about anything?"

"Yes," she yelled back. "Do you have a clean pair of pantyhose?"

Later, as she tore out the front door, I tugged at her sleeve and asked, "You wanta tell me how you feel about life?"

"I'm for it," she said simply pecking me on the cheek.

The next morning, she slept until noon and at lunch she wore a pair of headphones and a blank expression to the table. I was relieved when my husband and son pulled into the driveway. "How did you make out?" I asked.

He smiled triumphantly. "If I do say so myself, it was one of my better performances. I talked about values in this life and how sometimes it was hard not to become tainted by what is going on in the world around us, but we are a family and if we stick together, there isn't anything we can't do. I talked about aims and goals in life and how you had to be patient and sometimes compromise and you know ... all the brilliant things a kid will remember his father saying for the rest of his life."

"What did he say?" I asked excitedly.

"Nothing. He slept all the way up and back."

Dear Ann Landers

Wife gets 'bum rap' from friend

Dear Ann Landers: Although I have been a faithful reader for many years, I never understood why a person with a serious problem would consult your rather than seek professional help. Now, I'm eating my words.

My husband and I were married for 12 years. It was a happy and satisfying marriage, or so I thought. We had four children, all planned. My husband was a terrific father.

About five months ago, our fourth child was born. I asked a close friend to help with the other children while I was in the hospital.

My husband and I enjoyed her company, and the children absolutely adored her. It got to the point where we became a "three-parent family"! Now, it's a ONE-parent family. Three weeks ago, my husband and my "friend" (she's ten years his junior) ran off together. I am now trying to raise four small children alone.

Please, Ann, warn your readers to beware of "helpful" friends. In the meantime -- any suggestions? -- Bum Rap

Dear B.R.: Some friend. But bear in mind, dear, she didn't hit your husband over the head with a club and drag him off.

I would not be one bit surprised if eventually Daddy asked to come home. In fact, I'd be willing to bet on it. Sounds as if he wigged out -- temporarily. Let me know, will you?

Dear Ann Landers: I thought you were unfair to the mother who sent for your booklet on teenage sex and handed it to her daughter. You said, "Teenagers resent it when their parents send for something and say, 'READ THIS.'"

Our mother sent for several of your booklets and gave them to us to read. She often opened the newspaper to the page with your columnand left it where my sister and I would be sure to see it. Mom had very conservative views on sex and it was difficult for her to discuss certain things with us. We respected her for seeking outside help in areas where she felt inadequate.

We knew she cared. What's more, we got a lot of good advice from your booklets and your column. When the time came for us to make sexual choices we were well-informed and capable of directing our own lives. So please take back what you said, Ann. There must be lots of other mothers around like ours.-- Patty

Dear Patty: You are right. I was wrong. Mea culpa and a dozen lashes with a wet noodle for Ol'Annie. Thanks for the comeuppance. I needed that.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem and I feel the only way to solve it is by writing to you and having this letter printed in the newspaper.

I am employed in an office that is fairly large, but the people must work in close quarters. The woman who sits next to me has a very offensive odor. In fact, it is unbearable.

Several of us have discussed it but no one knows what to do. Subtle hints don't help. I'm writing to you in the hope you will print this letter and perhaps she will get the message.-- In Need of Fresh Air

Dear In Need: She will NOT get the message until someone gives it to her.

I suggest that several employees in your office clip this column and mail it to her. And since this problem is one I hear about at least a dozen times a day, you can be sure you will have helped a great many people across the country.

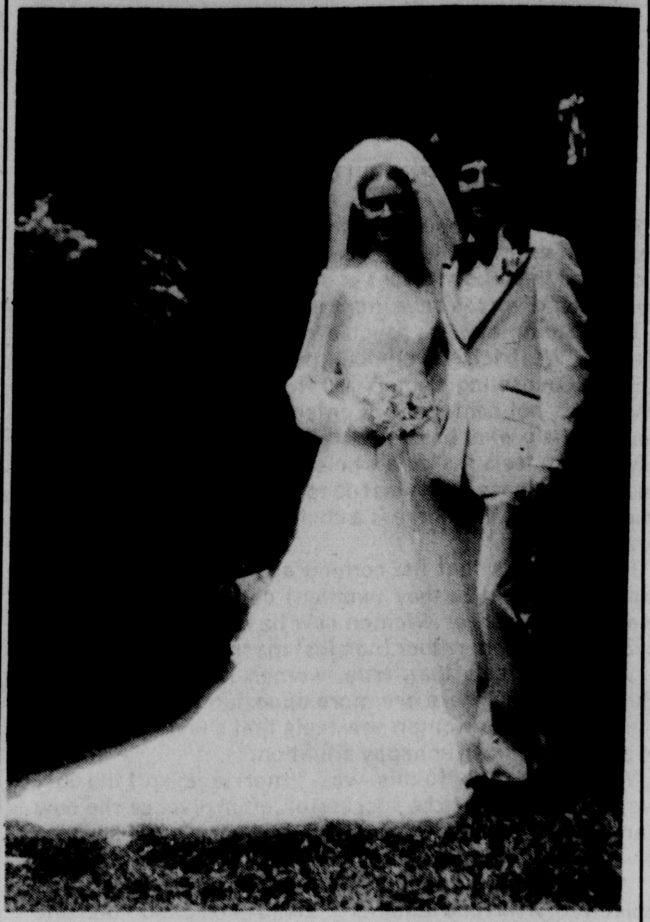
Wedding



Mr. and Mrs. David Keith Friga

ORAN — Cynthia Ann Pobst and David Keith Friga were married April 23 at the Guardian Angel Catholic Church. Father Richard Rolwing, the church pastor, officiated in the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pobst of Oran. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Friga of Chaffee Route One.

The bride chose and A-line silhouette gown featuring a crescent empire length waistline, a wedding band neckline adorned with tiny seed pearls and full bishop sleeves. The transparent yoke and sleeves were highlighted with chantilly lace and tiny seed pearls. Ployester crystal pleating accented the neckline, yoke, cuffs and chapel train.

As her head piece, the bride chose a double tiered veil of silk illusion attached to a camelot cap of venise lace and tiny seed pearls.

Best man was the brother of the groom, Paul Friga of Chaffee.

Guests were ushered by Mark Friga, brother of the groom of Chaffee and Ronnie Curtis of Oran.

A reception was held following the ceremony for the couple and their guests at the Knights of Columbus Hall at Oran. Servers were Mrs. Sara Pobst of Oran, the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Linda MeClendon and Mrs. Lisa Pobst both cousins of the bride and of Sikeston.

The bride is a 1974 graduate of Scott Central High School and is employed by the Oran State Bank in Oran.

The groom is a 1974 graduate fo Oran high School and is employed as a carpenter.

Mr. and Mrs. Friga are now living in Oran.

"Get on with it. What are you suggesting?"

"You should take your son fishing and I'll have the weekend here alone with our daughter. That way it's a one-on-one situation where we really get into the meaningful stuff."

Last week, as I watched father and son load up all the gear into the four-wheel drive, a lump came into my throat. When they left the driveway, I called to my daughter.

"Whatya want? I'm on the phone."

She was on the phone for more than five hours.

As she was showering, I feel to my knees and yelled under the door, "Do you want to talk about anything?"

"Yes," she yelled back. "Do you have a clean pair of pantyhose?"

Later, as she tore out the front door, I tugged at her sleeve and asked, "You wanta tell me how you feel about life?"

"I'm for it," she said simply pecking me on the cheek.

The next morning, she slept until noon and at lunch she wore a pair of headphones and a blank expression to the table. I was relieved when my husband and son pulled into the driveway. "How did you make out?" I asked.

He smiled triumphantly. "If I do say so myself, it was one of my better performances. I talked about values in this life and how sometimes it was hard not to become tainted by what is going on in the world around us, but we are a family and if we stick together, there isn't anything we can't do. I talked about aims and goals in life and how you had to be patient and sometimes compromise and you know ... all the brilliant things a kid will remember his father saying for the rest of his life."

"What did he say?" I asked excitedly.

"Nothing. He slept all the way up and back."

Dear Ann Landers

Wife gets 'bum rap' from friend

Dear Ann Landers: Although I have been a faithful reader for many years, I never understood why a person with a serious problem would consult your rather than seek professional help. Now, I'm eating my words.

My husband and I were married for 12 years. It was a happy and satisfying marriage, or so I thought. We had four children, all planned. My husband was a terrific father.

About five months ago, our fourth child was born. I asked a close friend to help with the other children while I was in the hospital.

My husband and I enjoyed her company, and the children absolutely adored her. It got to the point where we became a "three-parent family"! Now, it's a ONE-parent family. Three weeks ago, my husband and my "friend" (she's ten years his junior) ran off together. I am now trying to raise four small children alone.

Please, Ann, warn your readers to beware of "helpful" friends. In the meantime -- any suggestions? -- Bum Rap

Dear B.R.: Some friend. But bear in mind, dear, she didn't hit your husband over the head with a club and drag him off.

I would not be one bit surprised if eventually Daddy asked to come home. In fact, I'd be willing to bet on it. Sounds as if he wigged out -- temporarily. Let me know, will you?

Dear Ann Landers: I thought you were unfair to the mother who sent for your booklet on teenage sex and handed it to her daughter. You said, "Teenagers resent it when their parents send for something and say, 'READ THIS.'"

Our mother sent for several of your booklets and gave them to us to read. She often opened the newspaper to the page with your columnand left it where my sister and I would be sure to see it. Mom had very conservative views on sex and it was difficult for her to discuss certain things with us. We respected her for seeking outside help in areas where she felt inadequate.

We knew she cared. What's more, we got a lot of good advice from your booklets and your column. When the time came for us to make sexual choices we were well-informed and capable of directing our own lives. So please take back what you said, Ann. There must be lots of other mothers around like ours.-- Patty

Dear Patty: You are right. I was wrong. Mea culpa and a dozen lashes with a wet noodle for Ol'Annie. Thanks for the comeuppance. I needed that.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem and I feel the only way to solve it is by writing to you and having this letter printed in the newspaper.

I am employed in an office that is fairly large, but the people must work in close quarters. The woman who sits next to me has a very offensive odor. In fact, it is unbearable.

Several of us have discussed it but no one knows what to do. Subtle hints don't help. I'm writing to you in the hope you will print this letter and perhaps she will get the message.-- In Need of Fresh Air

Dear In Need: She will NOT get the message until someone gives it to her.

I suggest that several employees in your office clip this column and mail it to her. And since this problem is one I hear about at least a dozen times a day, you can be sure you will have helped a great many people across the country.

Ann Landers discusses teenage drinking -- its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading "Booze and You -- For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. David Keith Friga

ORAN — Cynthia Ann Pobst and David Keith Friga were married April 23 at the Guardian Angel Catholic Church. Father Richard Rolwing, the church pastor, officiated in the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pobst of Oran. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Friga of Chaffee Route One.

The bride chose and A-line silhouette gown featuring a crescent empire length waistline, a wedding band neckline adorned with tiny seed pearls and full bishop sleeves. The transparent yoke and sleeves were highlighted with chantilly lace and tiny seed pearls. Ployester crystal pleating accented the neckline, yoke, cuffs and chapel train.

As her head piece, the bride chose a double tiered veil of silk illusion attached to a camelot cap of venise lace and tiny seed pearls.

Best man was the brother of the groom, Paul Friga of Chaffee.

Guests were ushered by Mark Friga, brother of the groom of Chaffee and Ronnie Curtis of Oran.

A reception was held following the ceremony for the couple and their guests at the Knights of Columbus Hall at Oran. Servers were Mrs. Sara Pobst of Oran, the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Linda McClendon and Mrs. Lisa Pobst both cousins of the bride and of Sikeston.

The bride is a 1974 graduate of Scott Central High School and is employed by the Oran State Bank in Oran.

The groom is a 1974 graduate fo Oran high School and is employed as a carpenter.

Mr. and Mrs. Friga are now living in Oran.

Ask the pastor

Does courtship end after marriage?

By The Rev E.A. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I am enjoying your column in the newspaper very much. I have confidence that you will give me the right answer to this question. My husband said that our courtship ended immediately after marriage. Is he correct? - Sylva.

Dear Sylva: Courtship should be continued as long as both of you live. As you know, successful marriages do not happen - they must be developed. Don't take each other for granted or the monotony that results will destroy your marriage. Keep love growing by expressing love for one another or it dies, and you will drift apart. Love and happiness are not found by seeking them for yourself but rather by giving them to others. So spend as much time as possible doing things together, if you would get along. Learn to greet each other with enthusiasm.

Relax, visit, shop, sightsee, eat TOGETHER. Don't overlook the little courtesies, encouragements and affectionate acts. Surprise each other with little gifts. Try to "out-love" each other. Don't take more out of marriage than you put into it. Remember, divorce, itself, is not the greatest destroyer of marriage, but rather lack of love. Given a chance, LOVE always wins. See 1 Peter 4:8; Prov. 31:28; 1 Cor. 7:34; and Rom. 12:10.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I have often heard that being under grace means that we no longer need to keep the Law. Since your column has really impressed me, I would like to hear your opinion. - Harris.

Dear Harris: I have heard many people say the same thing that you have heard. However, my friend, the most important thing is, "What does the Bible say?" The Scriptures teach the very opposite. Grace is like the governor's pardon to a prisoner. It forgives him, but it does not give him freedom to break one single law on the statute books. The forgiven person, living under grace, is under double obligation to keep the law. A person who refuses to keep God's law saying that he is living under grace is mistaken. He is living under dis-grace.

The Bible says, "For SIN (breaking God's law - 1 John 3:4) shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace. What then? Shall we sin, (break the law((BECAUSE WE ARE NOT UNDER THE LAW, BUT UNDER GRACE? God forbid." Rom. 6:14, 15. "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." Romans 3:31. To say it's alright to break the law, is to say it's alright to kill. Is it alright to kill? The law says, Thou shalt not kill.

See Exodus 20:3-17.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I need your suggestion. I am living on a poor farm and am hardly able to do any work. However, I have been offered a job as a bartender in a hotel. I do not use liquor myself, and I am wondering if it would be wrong to make a living at that kind of work. - Henry.

Dear Henry: Many innocent people have been killed on the highways because of drinking drivers. I know that it would be wrong for me to sell liquor to anyone; and the fact that you ask leads me to assume that you feel that it would be wrong for you. Since you do not drink liquor yourself, you imply that you have conscientious scruples against doing so. Those same scruples should prevent you from encouraging others to do what you could not feel right in doing yourself.

Better stick to your poverty, your farm, and your clear conscience. The person you sell liquor to, maybe the same one to take your life in an accident, or in another way in his abnormal state.

Garden tip

Now is the time to plant pole, lima beans, okra and squash from seeds.

Set out egg plant, pepper and sweet potato plants.

Thin radish, turnip and carrot plants to allow growing room for crowded plants.

For your flower beds, there is still plenty of time to set out colius, caladium and begonias in shaded areas for the best results.

What is cholesterol?

Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to; Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Cooperative, Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Q. I would like to know more about cholesterol, since we seem to get conflicting stories. Is it a good idea to avoid foods that contain cholesterol?

A. The evidence we have at present does not indicate that every person should be following a diet low in cholesterol. However, it is apparent that diets rich in cholesterol and saturated fat tend to increase blood cholesterol levels, and high blood cholesterol increases the risk of heart disease.

Health statistics bear out the ralationship of diet and heart disease. People in industrialized countries tend to eat foods richer in total colories and in animal products (meat, egg and dairy foods) and have higher levels of blood cholesterol and more heart attacks than people in less advanced countries.

Animal fats contain cholesterol and saturated fat, both of which tend to increase blood cholesterol levels when consumed in diets. Poly-unsaturated fats, on the other hand, may cause blood cholesterol levels to decrease. Polyunsaturated fats are mainly from vegetables or fish, and tend to be liquid at room temperature. Fats that are hard at room temperature (butterfat, lard, cocoanut oil and hydrogenated vegetabel oil) tend to be saturated.

A difference is apparent between western nations where diets are markedly different in the amount of animal fats they contain. In Japan, where intake of animal products is quite low cholesterol levels and heart disease incidence are lower than in th United States. Immigrants from Japan tend to change to U.S. — type diets, and also exhibit the higher levels of blood cholesterol and greater incidence of heart disease typical of Americans. Similar observations have been made on immigrants form other areas.

Q. How can I tell which food products contain cholesterol and which contain polyunsaturated fat(?

A. You should assume that all processed foods, particularly baked foods,were made with saturated fats unless specific claims are made on the label about polyunsaturated fat content. Oil from corn, sunflowers, soybeans and safflower are high in polyunsaturates. Cholesterol is found only in animal fats, and therefore will not be present in all-vegetable products.

It is important to remembr that foods that contain cholesterol do not directly cause heart disease, but may add to the problem by contributing to blood cholesterol levels. however, many individuals eat great quantities of animal fats all their lives and never develop heart disease.Obviously, many things are involved in this problem which is far from being completely understood.

Smoking cigarettes is another factor that is known to increase the risk of heart disease, the effect being in proportion to the frequency of smoking (heavy smokers are at greater risk). High blood pressure also make heart attacks more likely.

Some other things that add to the problem include the lack of exercise, stress, obesity and diabetes. As you might expect, the risk of heart attack is greater when a combination of these factors occur at the same time, such as a person who doesn't exercise, eats a typical American diet, smokes cigarettes and is overweight.

Thelma plans to be married

Seventh annual talent search underway

The Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising is once again conducting its annual search for the nation's most gifted young fashion design talent. The school, a two-year college accredited by AICS, specializes in training young people for careers in Fashion Design, Merchandising, and Interior Design.

The "Designer of Tomorrow" contest, now in its seventh year, is open to 1977 high school graduates and older students interested in a fashion career. Participants compete for a $2500 scholarship to the school and an all-expense paid study tour to the fashion capitals of Europe.

Well-known personalities from the worlds of entertainment and fashion serve as contest judges. Among the experts who annually assist in the selection of the winner are Edith Head, internationally famous designer and multi-Oscar winner; Bob Mackie whose award-winning gowns are worn by many of the world's most glamorous stars; Ray Aghayan, Emmy Award winner and TV producer; and MaryLou Luther, Fashion Editor of the Los Angeles Times. Special 1977 panel members include popular California designers Harriet Selwyn and Holly Harp.

This year's celebrity judge is lovely Ann-Margret popular motion picture and television star and one of the most sought-after Hollywood personalities whose many accomplishments include a Golden Globe Award as best supporting actress by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association and an Academy Award nomination for her role in "Carnal Knowledge." For the sixth successive year Bullock's is actively participating in the contest. The store will host a press party to introduce the winner, as well as the first and second runner up, and will sponsor an exhibit of the entries in its downtown Los Angeles and Sherman Oaks locations.

The Fashion Institute is located at 818 West Seventh Street in downtown Los Angeles with branches in San Francisco at 790 Market Street and in the San Fernando Valley in Sherman Oaks at 13701 Riverside Drive.

Further information about the contest can be obtained by calling or writing Miss Donna Smith at The Fashion Institute.

Cooks may be largest energy waster of all

GAITHERSBURG, MD. (AP) — Cooks who keep opening the oven door to check on dinner are among the biggest energy wasters in the kitchen, a federal study concludes.

The National Bureau of Standards, the country's chief measuring laboratory, recruited 58 women to cook three meals a day for a week in a kitchen monitored by television cameras and one-way mirrors. They were not told the purpose of the study.

The bureau, which is headquartered near here, concluded some cooks use 50 per cent more gas and electricity than others because of bad kitchen habits.

"Many consumers could achieve significant energy savings in the kitchen if they learned to use their ranges more efficiently," the researchers said.

Household Hints

A few pieces of charcoal tied in cheese cloth and placed on a shelf of your refrigerator will help keep the unit sweet smelling.

Peanut Butter 'n Ham Spread: Take 2 (3 oz.) cans of deviled ham, 1/4 cup of chunky peanut butter and 2 teaspoons of prepared mustard and empty deviled ham into a bowl. Next, add peanut butter and mustard and mix thoroughly. The spread makes a tasty topping for crackers.

Want to enjoy really fresh coffee at lower cost? An electric coffee mill may be the answer, according to researchers for KitchenAid appliances. Whole coffee beans are usually priced lower than ground coffee, and — for the true coffee lover — there's nothing better than a cup of freshly brewed coffee that's just been freshly ground.

And, these experts point out, the key words to remember are "planetary action" when looking for a food mixer. This is the same method used by large commercial bakeries in their bakery mixers. As with commercial units, two of the three KitchenAid food preparers use a special "dough hook" for mixing and kneading homemade yeast breads. Homemade bread. . . Yum!

Camera Three presents vocal, instrumental quartets

"Camera Three" presents the New York Vocal Arts Ensemble and the American String Quartet as they perform a program of mixed quartets on Sunday, May 22 on the CBS Television Network.

The program will include instrumental quartets, vocal quartets and a quartet for voices and instruments together.

The New York Vocal Arts Ensemble will perform, in Russian, selections from "Seven Vocal Quartets, Opus 59," as written by the 19th century Russian composer Cesar Cui. These pieces are rarely performed in the west and probably have never before been performed on television.

The American String Quartet will perform a movement from Mendelssohn's "String Quartet, Opus 12."

Then the two groups will join forces as they perform Beethoven's brilliant octet, "Elegiac Song, Sanfit Wie Du Lebtest."

What is cholesterol?

Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to; Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Cooperative, Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Q. I would like to know more about cholesterol, since we seem to get conflicting stories. Is it a good idea to avoid foods that contain cholesterol?

A. The evidence we have at present does not indicate that every person should be following a diet low in cholesterol. However, it is apparent that diets rich in cholesterol and saturated fat tend to increase blood cholesterol levels, and high blood cholesterol increases the risk of heart disease.

Health statistics bear out the ralationship of diet and heart disease. People in industrialized countries tend to eat foods richer in total colories and in animal products (meat, egg and dairy foods) and have higher levels of blood cholesterol and more heart attacks than people in less advanced countries.

Animal fats contain cholesterol and saturated fat, both of which tend to increase blood cholesterol levels when consumed in diets. Poly-unsaturated fats, on the other hand, may cause blood cholesterol levels to decrease. Polyunsaturated fats are mainly from vegetables or fish, and tend to be liquid at room temperature. Fats that are hard at room temperature (butterfat, lard, cocoanut oil and hydrogenated vegetabel oil) tend to be saturated.

A difference is apparent between western nations where diets are markedly different in the amount of animal fats they contain. In Japan, where intake of animal products is quite low cholesterol levels and heart disease incidence are lower than in th United States. Immigrants from Japan tend to change to U.S. — type diets, and also exhibit the higher levels of blood cholesterol and greater incidence of heart disease typical of Americans. Similar observations have been made on immigrants form other areas.

Q. How can I tell which food products contain cholesterol and which contain polyunsaturated fat(?

A. You should assume that all processed foods, particularly baked foods,were made with saturated fats unless specific claims are made on the label about polyunsaturated fat content. Oil from corn, sunflowers, soybeans and safflower are high in polyunsaturates. Cholesterol is found only in animal fats, and therefore will not be present in all-vegetable products.

It is important to remembr that foods that contain cholesterol do not directly cause heart disease, but may add to the problem by contributing to blood cholesterol levels. however, many individuals eat great quantities of animal fats all their lives and never develop heart disease.Obviously, many things are involved in this problem which is far from being completely understood.

Smoking cigarettes is another factor that is known to increase the risk of heart disease, the effect being in proportion to the frequency of smoking (heavy smokers are at greater risk). High blood pressure also make heart attacks more likely.

Some other things that add to the problem include the lack of exercise, stress, obesity and diabetes. As you might expect, the risk of heart attack is greater when a combination of these factors occur at the same time, such as a person who doesn't exercise, eats a typical American diet, smokes cigarettes and is overweight.

Thelma plans to be married

Seventh annual talent search underway

The Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising is once again conducting its annual search for the nation's most gifted young fashion design talent. The school, a two-year college accredited by AICS, specializes in training young people for careers in Fashion Design, Merchandising, and Interior Design.

The "Designer of Tomorrow" contest, now in its seventh year, is open to 1977 high school graduates and older students interested in a fashion career. Participants compete for a $2500 scholarship to the school and an all-expense paid study tour to the fashion capitals of Europe.

Well-known personalities from the worlds of entertainment and fashion serve as contest judges. Among the experts who annually assist in the selection of the winner are Edith Head, internationally famous designer and multi-Oscar winner; Bob Mackie whose award-winning gowns are worn by many of the world's most glamorous stars; Ray Aghayan, Emmy Award winner and TV producer; and MaryLou Luther, Fashion Editor of the Los Angeles Times. Special 1977 panel members include popular California designers Harriet Selwyn and Holly Harp.

This year's celebrity judge is lovely Ann-Margret popular motion picture and television star and one of the most sought-after Hollywood personalities whose many accomplishments include a Golden Globe Award as best supporting actress by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association and an Academy Award nomination for her role in "Carnal Knowledge." For the sixth successive year Bullock's is actively participating in the contest. The store will host a press party to introduce the winner, as well as the first and second runner up, and will sponsor an exhibit of the entries in its downtown Los Angeles and Sherman Oaks locations.

The Fashion Institute is located at 818 West Seventh Street in downtown Los Angeles with branches in San Francisco at 790 Market Street and in the San Fernando Valley in Sherman Oaks at 13701 Riverside Drive.

Further information about the contest can be obtained by calling or writing Miss Donna Smith at The Fashion Institute.

Cooks may be largest energy waster of all

GAITHERSBURG, MD. (AP) — Cooks who keep opening the oven door to check on dinner are among the biggest energy wasters in the kitchen, a federal study concludes.

The National Bureau of Standards, the country's chief measuring laboratory, recruited 58 women to cook three meals a day for a week in a kitchen monitored by television cameras and one-way mirrors. They were not told the purpose of the study.

The bureau, which is headquartered near here, concluded some cooks use 50 per cent more gas and electricity than others because of bad kitchen habits.

"Many consumers could achieve significant energy savings in the kitchen if they learned to use their ranges more efficiently," the researchers said.

Household Hints

A few pieces of charcoal tied in cheese cloth and placed on a shelf of your refrigerator will help keep the unit sweet smelling.

Peanut Butter 'n Ham Spread: Take 2 (3 oz.) cans of deviled ham, 1/4 cup of chunky peanut butter and 2 teaspoons of prepared mustard and empty deviled ham into a bowl. Next, add peanut butter and mustard and mix thoroughly. The spread makes a tasty topping for crackers.

Want to enjoy really fresh coffee at lower cost? An electric coffee mill may be the answer, according to researchers for KitchenAid appliances. Whole coffee beans are usually priced lower than ground coffee, and — for the true coffee lover — there's nothing better than a cup of freshly brewed coffee that's just been freshly ground.

And, these experts point out, the key words to remember are "planetary action" when looking for a food mixer. This is the same method used by large commercial bakeries in their bakery mixers. As with commercial units, two of the three KitchenAid food preparers use a special "dough hook" for mixing and kneading homemade yeast breads. Homemade bread. . . Yum!

Camera Three presents vocal, instrumental quartets

"Camera Three" presents the New York Vocal Arts Ensemble and the American String Quartet as they perform a program of mixed quartets on Sunday, May 22 on the CBS Television Network.

The program will include instrumental quartets, vocal quartets and a quartet for voices and instruments together.

The New York Vocal Arts Ensemble will perform, in Russian, selections from "Seven Vocal Quartets, Opus 59," as written by the 19th century Russian composer Cesar Cui. These pieces are rarely performed in the west and probably have never before been performed on television.

Then the two groups will join forces as they perform Beethoven's brilliant octet, "Elegiac Song, Sanfit Wie Du Lebtest."

Open Mind

Emotional upsts need help

DEAR OPEN MIND:

My husband thinks someone is trying to harm or rob him. He is over seventy, but in good health. He eats well and used to sleep well, but last night he went out and ran to his cousin's in his underwear, barefoot. I begged him not to, but could not hold him.

We went to a church supper, and he jumped out of the car before it stopped. He told them he was frightened.

His doctor says there is no medicine to help. He said we should try sleeping pills. Is it possible to give something when he becomes nervous or confused? I wish to keep him at home but do not want him disturbing others.

Loving Wife

Seek opinion

Dear Wife:

In recent years a new field called Geriatric Psychiatry has come into being. Common problems of the aging are depression, persecutory states, and behavioral changes associated with organic brain impairment. While some problems, such as depression, are curable, the others are manageable enough to keep the patient comfortable at home.

In a situation such as yours, the answer can be put only in general terms. It would appear that your husband is in good health. However, he has become irritable and anxious, has persecutory feelings with disturbed sleep and impaired judgment.

I would have liked to know if this emotional upset came on gradually or suddenly and also about the patient's memory, orientation, judgment regarding finances, mood, agitatiion if any, etc. It is probable that the patient has an organic brain reaction. This may be secondary to another condition elsewhere in the body, such as an infection, heart or lung condition, temporary reduction in blood supply to the brain, use of alcohol or other drugs. If this is so, the condition is usually of short duration and is reversible with appropriate treatment of basic physical condition and a tranquilizer. If the problems came on slowly and are associated with disturbance in activities of daily living such as dressing, bathing, eating, dealing with financial and social affairs, rigidity of attitudes, wandering, agitation, forgetfulness, etc., then the patient may well have a chronic brain reaction, which basically may be irreversible. However, the problems can be contained with small but adequate doses of a tranquilizer.

One has to be careful in the use of sleeping pills in the elderly. If the loss of sleep is due to depression, then the treatment is with antidepressnats. If the loss of sleep is due to paranoid feelings and hallucinations, the treatment is with a tranquilizer. A sleeping pill may be used for a short time only.

Advances in recent years suggest that many problems of aging have multiple causes, and the aging patient has to be seen as a person with a lifetime of experiences and to be understood as such rather than as a disease per se.

Dear Loving Wife:

Let us consider the social aspects of your husband's behavior.

Apparently your family doctor is of the opinion that physical health is not the problem. The implication is that the behavior you describe is a result of social and emotional factor. Therefore, if physical conditions (health) are not the cause of the behavior, you should seek more understanding through consultation with a psychiatrist or social worker with experience in the behavioral problems of the aging and aged.

If possible, both you and your husband should seek this help together, initially, and then continue as the thereapist suggests.

Government action, smarter driving could cut gas usage

Tough government measures and smart driving habits would go a long way toward reducing the typical American motorist's gasoline bill, according to the Ignition Manufacturers Institute.

Mandatory periodic motor vehicle safety and emissions inspections would result in safer cars capable of delivering better gas mileage IMI says. In New Jersey, where annual vehicle inspection is mandatory, authorities report that cars that failed the State's emissions test (about 12 per cent) recorded savings of 22 million gallons a year after being tuned-up. Inspections and appropriate follow-up maintenance would also substantially reduce exhaust emissions, thereby improving the air quality in urban and suburban areas.

Municipalities could make a significant dent in fuel consumption, IMI says, by timing traffic lights and speed limits to eliminate start-and-stop driving conditions caused by randomly timed traffic lights. One community, Inglewood California, retimed 60 traffic lights and was able to document a 19 per cent fuel savings for the distance involved. More intelligent routing of traffic such as the use of one-way streets, improved parking patterns, and better street maintenance would also help conserve fuel.

IMI also calls for rigorous enforcement of the 55 mph speed limit. Considering the number of vehicles using interstates and turnpikes, and the small percentage that are driven at or below 55 mph, there is a significant amount of gas being wasted every day, IMI says. The Federal Energy Administration finds that most automobiles get about 21 per cent more mpg on the highways at 55 mph than they do at 70 mph.

No matter what the government does, mileage depends finally on one's own driving habits. To save money by increasing miles per gallon performance 1) maintain a steady speed when cruising, 2) accelerate smoothly from rest, don't use the maximum acceleration your car is capable of, drive at the slowest speed consistent with smooth traffic flow and keep idling time and warm-up time to a minimum.

What good gas mileage comes down to, then, is a cooperative effort by government and drivers. Energy conservation efforts by government to help boost gas mileage should include enforcement of the 55 mph limit, better traffic flow, and mandatory vehicle inspection. The car owner should have his vehicle tuned up and serviced regularly and should develop proper driving habits.

Energy conservation, says IMI, is no longer a matter of letting someone else do it. What each of us does, does make a difference.

Review canning methods to insure food safety

COLUMBIA, Mo. — They look innocent enough, those Mason jars filled with home- canned preserves, tomatoes and other foods.

They may even look unspoiled and taste like good and healthy food. But, despite appearances, home canned foods may be full of botulinum toxin, unless proper methods were used in canning, says Mildred Bradsher, University of Missouri-Columbia food scientist.

"Remember that one teaspoon of botulinum toxin is enough to cause botulism in a million people. And botulism can kill," Bradsher says.

A review of home canning methods to insure that caned foods on hand are safe can save a lot of worry, she emphasizes.

Bradsher offers the following list of questions to help insure the safety of canned foods:

—"Did you follow the time tables printed within the past 10 years by the USDA, the University of Missouri, one of the major jar companies, one of the major pressure canner manufacturers or the National Canners Assn.?" These time tables specify methods ot processing foods in the jar.

Some foods should be processed in a pressure canner at either 5 or 10 pounds pressure, depending on the food. "Meats, poultry and fish and all vegetables except tomatoes should be processed at 10 pounds," she says.

Processing time means the steam is allowed to escape for 10 minutes before the petcock (air valve) on the canner is closed. Then the pressure buildings to the desired amount (5 or 10 pounds). Then, the homemakers should watch the clock and process for the food's recommended time.

The UM food scientist suggests processing tomatoes at 5 pounds for 10 minutes.

"Other tables suggest processing tomatoes in boiling water bath 35 minutes for pints and 45 minutes for quarts, if the food is to be packed cold; and ten minutes for pints or quarts if packed hot," Bradsher says. A "hot water bath" means the water is an inch or more above the jar. Time is counted from the boiling point after the jars are placed in the water.

"Hot pack" means the food is boiling hot when placed into jars, is closed up and put into the processing kettle without delay.

—"Was all food processed after it was placed in jars? That includes pickles, sauerkraut, jellies, jams, preserves, marmalades and butters.

—"Were fruits and vegetables gathered at the peak of quality and canned the same day they were picked?" Exceptions include pears, apples, plums and cherries.

—"Remove air from the jar by inserting a round point knife, spoon handle or similar blunt instrument inside the jar at two or three locations.

—"Food not canned in the pressure or hot bath processes -- tomatoes, fruits, pickles, sauerkraut or other food -- should be boiled before tasting." If you wish to serve it cold, chill it after boiling.

Grandma's Corner

By Jill Corti

The painting bug must have hit the area recently as I've received several calls and notes for a repeat of the paint brush cleaner tips and painting tips listed in the April 5 edition of The Daily Standard, so, here goes.

Painting fever bug hit our house this weekend with the hopes of warm weather so with that come a few tips for those of us handy with a paint brush.

When painting and you have to keep the house shut up, put one ounce of vanilla to half gallon of paint. This will help rid the paint smell.

If the inside of your linen closet is painted a deep blue, there will be no danger of your linens turning yellow. It will also eliminate the annoyance of having to wrap linens you do not use too often such as tablecloths.

A pail of water set in a freshly painted room will remove the odor.

To prevent scum forming over left over paint in a can here are three tips, pour a little linseed oil over paint before sealing or put one tablespoon of paint in grove before forcing lid on can. Last, but not least, put a small amount of paraffin over it before putting it away and the paint will not dry out.

Before painting a door, coat the doorknobs, locks and hinges with petroleum jelly. When painting is done wipe off the knobs, locks and hinges with a soft cloth to remove the jelly and any paint that has been spilled.

Want to stop scraping windows after painting... just cut strips of The Daily Standard the size of the window and dip in water and they will stick on easily. Then as soon as you're done pull the paper off.

It doesn't matter how hard the paint brush may have become, it may be cleaned and softened if mixed with two tablespoons salt, ½ cup kerosene and one quart warm water. Soak brushes for two hours and wipe off with dry cloth. Or another method is place the brushes in hot vinegar and then wash in warm soap suds.

After all the painting is done in the house and on yourself and you are ready to call it a day but suddenly discover spots on your skin, simply rub a llittle nail polish remover or rubbing alcohol on with a piece of tissue. Saves the skin and the smell.

Happy painting.....

No matter what the government does, mileage depends finally on one's own driving habits. To save money by increasing miles per gallon performance 1) maintain a steady speed when cruising, 2) accelerate smoothly from rest, don't use the maximum acceleration your car is capable of, drive at the slowest speed consistent with smooth traffic flow and keep idling time and warm-up time to a minimum.

What good gas mileage comes down to, then, is a cooperative effort by government and drivers. Energy conservation efforts by government to help boost gas mileage should include enforcement of the 55 mph limit, better traffic flow, and mandatory vehicle inspection. The car owner should have his vehicle tuned up and serviced regularly and should develop proper driving habits.

Energy conservation, says IMI, is no longer a matter of letting someone else do it. What each of us does, does make a difference.

Review canning methods to insure food safety

They may even look unspoiled and taste like good and healthy food. But, despite appearances, home canned foods may be full of botulinum toxin, unless proper methods were used in canning, says Mildred Bradsher, University of Missouri-Columbia food scientist.

"Remember that one teaspoon of botulinum toxin is enough to cause botulism in a million people. And botulism can kill," Bradsher says.

A review of home canning methods to insure that caned foods on hand are safe can save a lot of worry, she emphasizes.

Bradsher offers the following list of questions to help insure the safety of canned foods:

—"Did you follow the time tables printed within the past 10 years by the USDA, the University of Missouri, one of the major jar companies, one of the major pressure canner manufacturers or the National Canners Assn.?" These time tables specify methods of processing foods in the jar.

Some foods should be processed in a pressure canner at either 5 or 10 pounds pressure, depending on the food. "Meats, poultry and fish and all vegetables except tomatoes should be processed at 10 pounds," she says.

Processing time means the steam is allowed to escape for 10 minutes before the petcock (air valve) on the canner is closed. Then the pressure buildings to the desired amount (5 or 10 pounds). Then, the homemakers should watch the clock and process for the food's recommended time.

The UM food scientist suggests processing tomatoes at 5 pounds for 10 minutes.

"Other tables suggest processing tomatoes in boiling water bath 35 minutes for pints and 45 minutes for quarts, if the food is to be packed cold; and ten minutes for pints or quarts if packed hot," Bradsher says. A "hot water bath" means the water is an inch or more above the jar. Time is counted from the boiling point after the jars are placed in the water.

"Hot pack" means the food is boiling hot when placed into jars, is closed up and put into the processing kettle without delay.

—"Was all food processed after it was placed in jars? That includes pickles, sauerkraut, jellies, jams, preserves, marmalades and butters.

—"Were fruits and vegetables gathered at the peak of quality and canned the same day they were picked?" Exceptions include pears, apples, plums and cherries.

—"Remove air from the jar by inserting a round point knife, spoon handle or similar blunt instrument inside the jar at two or three locations.

—"Food not canned in the pressure or hot bath processes -- tomatoes, fruits, pickles, sauerkraut or other food -- should be boiled before tasting." If you wish to serve it cold, chill it after boiling.

Grandma's Corner

By Jill Corti

The painting bug must have hit the area recently as I've received several calls and notes for a repeat of the paint brush cleaner tips and painting tips listed in the April 5 edition of The Daily Standard, so, here goes.

Painting fever bug hit our house this weekend with the hopes of warm weather so with that come a few tips for those of us handy with a paint brush.

When painting and you have to keep the house shut up, put one ounce of vanilla to half gallon of paint. This will help rid the paint smell.

If the inside of your linen closet is painted a deep blue, there will be no danger of your linens turning yellow. It will also eliminate the annoyance of having to wrap linens you do not use too often such as tablecloths.

A pail of water set in a freshly painted room will remove the odor.

To prevent scum forming over left over paint in a can here are three tips, pour a little linseed oil over paint before sealing or put one tablespoon of paint in grove before forcing lid on can. Last, but not least, put a small amount of paraffin over it before putting it away and the paint will not dry out.

Before painting a door, coat the doorknobs, locks and hinges with petroleum jelly. When painting is done wipe off the knobs, locks and hinges with a soft cloth to remove the jelly and any paint that has been spilled.

Want to stop scraping windows after painting... just cut strips of The Daily Standard the size of the window and dip in water and they will stick on easily. Then as soon as you're done pull the paper off.

It doesn't matter how hard the paint brush may have become, it may be cleaned and softened if mixed with two tablespoons salt, ½ cup kerosene and one quart warm water. Soak brushes for two hours and wipe off with dry cloth. Or another method is place the brushes in hot vinegar and then wash in warm soap suds.

After all the painting is done in the house and on yourself and you are ready to call it a day but suddenly discover spots on your skin, simply rub a llittle nail polish remover or rubbing alcohol on with a piece of tissue. Saves the skin and the smell.

Happy painting.....

36 outstanding women are selected to state committee

WASHINGTON— (Thirty-six outstanding women have been designated as members of the Missouri coordinating committee for an historic meeting, part of a nationwide series, on the rights and responsibilities of women.

The Missouri State Women's Meeting is scheduled for June 3-5 at Washington University in St. Louis. Committee members were selected as individuals rather than as representatives of specific organizations.

In 1976, Congress named the National Commission on the Obnservance of International Women's Year (IWY) as sponsor for 36 State meetings, all to be held by the end of the summer. ("State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific.)

A National Women's Conference, scheduled for November 18-21 in Houston, Texas. will draw representatives elected by the State meetings and appointed by the National Commission.

Based on the results of the State meetings, the National Conference will make recommendations to eliminate the barriers that prevent women from participating fully and equally in all aspects of National Life.

Recommendations and a final report will be submitted by the National Commission to the President and Congress in March 1978.

Jean Berg, of St. Charles, will chair the Missouri committee. Ms. Berg was a delegate representing the Experiment in International Living at the IWY Conference in Mexico City, 1975, and ran for the U.S. Congress from Missouri's 9th district. She has been active in numerous organizations including the American Association of University Women and the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Other members include:

Betty Ann Adams, of Jefferson City, member and former chair, Missouri Commission on the Status of Women; former national projects chair and current member, Delta Sigma Theta, Inc.

Ina Boon, of St. Louis, Regional Director of Region IV and life member, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; member, Young Men's Christian Association.

Muriel Caldwell, of Shelbina, historian, American Legion Auxiliary; program material and hospitality local chair, United Methodist Church, farmwife and president, County Extention Club.

Elida Cardenas, of Kansas City, program chair, Federally Employed Women; IMAGE--a national Spanish-speaking organization concerned with government employees; member, League of United Latin American Citizens and American G.I. Forum.

Marie Ceselski, of Joplin, member, Democrats for a Better Government, Common Cause; political science-journalism student at Missouri Southern State College.

Joanne Collins, of Kansas City, member, Kansas City City Council, Third District At-Large; member, National Council of Negro Women and the Missouri State Advisory Committee, U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Anne Edwards, of Columbia, chair, Columbia Committee on Employment of the Handicapped; executive committee member, Missouri Commission on the Employment of the Handicapped; State task force member, White House Conference on the Handicapped.

Frankie Freeman, of St. Louis, commissioner, U.S. Commission on Civil Rights; legal advisor and past national president, Delta Sigma Theta; board member, United Way of Metropolitan St. Louis; Trustee, Washington Tabernacle Baptist Church.

Gwen Giles, of St. Louis, Director of Civil Rights, St. Louis Civil Rights Enforcement Agency; Secretary, International Association of Official Human Rights Agencies.

Rosemary Ginn, United States Ambassador to Luxembourg, 1976; Chair, United States National Commission for UNESCO, 1974-1976; Board of Directors, Missouri Stores Company.

Inez Kaiser, of Kansas City, president, Whitney M. Young Jr. Urban League Guild; president, National Association of Minority Women in Business; president, Inez Kaiser and Associates, Inc.

Hazel Kohring, of St. Louis, national president, Women Leaders Roundtable of National Association of Life Underwirters; chair of the board, Missouri Heart Association.

Joan Krauskopf, of Columbia, member, Missouri Human Rights Commission; Governor's Committee for Children and Youth, and the Missouri Bar and American Bar Family Law Committees.

Phyllis La Fata, of St. Louis, member, Young Women's Christian Association of Metropolitian St. Louis; National Organization for Women, St. Louis Chapter.

Donna McClain, of St. Louis, president, Communication Workers of America, Local 6300; director, St. Louis Telephone Employees Credit Union; director, Greater St. Louis United Way.

Alberta Meyer, of Jefferson City, chair, Missouri Commission on the Status of Women, 1967-1973; past president, Missouri Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; member, Missouri League of Women Voters.

Ann O'Donnell, of St. Louis, registered nurse; president of the State, chair Eastern Region and board member, Missouri Citizens for Life; immediate past president, Aware Center for Family Planning.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 15, the 135th day of 1977. There are 230 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, the Netherlands surrendered to Germany in World War II.

On this date:

In 1571, Moscow was burned by the Tartars.

In 1602, Cape Cod was discovered by the English navigator, Bartholomew Gosnold.

In 1862, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was established by Congress.

In 1970, Elizabeth Hoisington and Anna Mae Hays became women generals in the U.S. Army.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court extended to juveniles the same constitutional guarantees as those provided for adults accused of crimes.

Five years ago: Gov. George Wallace of Alabama was shot and seriously wounded at a presidential political rally in Laurel, Md.

Thought for today: "Santa Claus had the right idea: Visit people once a year." — Victor Borge, entertainer, born 1909.

Tornado hits Poplar Bluff

60 years ago
May 15, 1917

Oran--E. Mildie of Jackson was here Monday.

Mothers' Day will be observed next Sunday at the Baptist Church. The pastor will preach an appropriate sermon at 11 o'clock.

The Knights of Ezelah of the Methodist Church had a happy time in the church basement Tuesday when the "Reds" entertained the "Blacks" because the former lost in a recent membership contest with the latter. Paul Denman was awarded a big pie for telling the best humorous story.

Mr. and Mrs. Jean Hirschberg are rejoicing over the birth of a daughter on May 6 at Cape Girardeau.

When the high waters were upon us, with levees breaking, homes and live stock lost, Southeast Missouri thought she was hard hit, but it meant little to the awful tornado that hit our neighboring city of Poplar Bluff Monday afternoon. It is a hard matter to get at the actual number of killed and wounded, but the latest report Thursday morning gave the number of deaths as 101, while the wounded was close to 300.

In a pre-season game played at Dexter last Sunday between Sikeston and Dexter, we were visitors by a 10 to 1 score.

Morehouse--Morehouse sent 40 men, 15 nurses and one doctor on the relief train which ran to Poplar Bluff following the tornado Monday. The doctor and nurses proceeded to the improvised hospitals and aided the injured. The men formed in squads and worked all night extricating the dead and injured from the debris. Joe Mocabee and his squad dug a woman out from under many tons of brick and lumber under a hotel, who was still alive.

The Sikeston High School boys' double tennis teams split with the Morehouse teams on the Van Horne courts Monday, Bill VAn Horne and Roger Fisher of Sikeston winning from Frank Parrish and Ruben Gives, 8-6 and 10-8, while Tommy Marshall and Billy Van Arsdale lost to the Morehouse team composed of Harold Henson and Dick Fisher, 6-3 and 6-4.

Reid Jann announced Monday that he had signed a contract to teach music in the Desloge High School next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Williams of Springfield, Mo., announce the birth of a son on May 6. Mrs. Williams is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prewitt Roberts of Sikeston.

The latest reports from the office of Prin. Wm. E. Mahew indicates that 73 seniors will be eligible for graduation on May 24. This year's graduating class will be the largest in the history of the school. Seniors are: Thomas Bloomfield, Ben Bowman, John W. Bowman, James Bryant, William Carroll, Robert Childress, David Cline, Laverne Comer, Leo Cook, Jesse Cotton, Warren Corwin, Norvel Crowe, William Ellis, G. B. Greer, Moore Greer, jr., Doyle Heath.

Paul J. Trotter was installed Wednesday at a meeting at the armory, as commander of the Semo Post of Amvets No. 15 for the second year.

Four new teachers were hired for the school term beginning in September by the Sikeston School Board at a meeting of the board Tuesday. The new teachers are: Miss Martha Howard Jones, who formerly taught at Lilbourn; Mrs. Jean Golladay, who is returning as physical educaton teacher; Miss Irene Richey, who has been teaching privately in Detroit, Mich.; and Miss Lauranna Mainord of East Prairie, who has been teaching in Morley and Dogwood schools. The board also approved the construction of a new bleacher section to be erected at the high school football field.

The Sikeston High School medley relay team, composed of Roy Pryor, Jack Mitchell, Wayne Clayton, and Ned Tanner, won the state championship in competition with teams from all over Missouri in the stae high school track meet held at Columbia Saturday.

Miss Mary Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gray, will leave June 1 for Memphis, Tenn., wher she has enrolled in the Baptist memorial Hospital in that city for nurses training.

"Maybe you did," retorted Mr. Smith, "but I didn't get it yet. So, as far as I'm concerned, I can cancel it. While it may have been a fantastic offer, it was also a pretty stupid one and I have no intention of being bound by it."

This is how the judge ruled: NO. As it turned out, the offer was on the owner couldn't refuse. In fact, he was so overwhelmed by Mr. Smith's generosity that he mailed back an immediate acceptance. Before it was delivered, however, Mr. Smith reviewed his offer and he too became overwhelmed by his generosity -- and raced to the nearest telephone and attempted to withdraw it.

"Sorry, old buddy," responded the owner, "but it's too late to do that. I received your fantastic offer and I've already sent you a letter accepting it."

"Maybe you did," retorted Mr. Smith, "but I didn't get it yet. So, as far as I'm concerned, I can cancel it. While it may have been a fantastic offer, it was also a pretty stupid one and I have no intention of being bound by it."

DAVID SHY, SHYS DRUG STORE

Wanema Townsley, manager of Cason's Pennyrich Boutique, 363 Main St., Batesville, has reported remarkable success with a high protein food, NaturSlim, which is sold by the boutique.

Mrs. Townsley, a user of NaturSlim, reported loss of 35 pounds in three months and that she has not regained the weight. She has introduced NaturSlim to hundreds of persons in the Batesville area who have reported loss of from a few pounds to 70 pounds.

Key to the NaturSlim program, Mrs. Townsley says, is use of the product, which makes a variety of Milkshakes for breakfast and lunch. This, she says, provides two high protein meals and the user is free to eat anything desired for dinner.

The weight loss program requires no exercises, no drugs or shots and best of all, brings on no hunger pangs. Mrs. Townsley, who claims to be the best ad for NaturSlim, emphasizes the general well-being, improved attitude, looks and health which result from weight loss. She also adds that NaturSlim is not an expensive product.

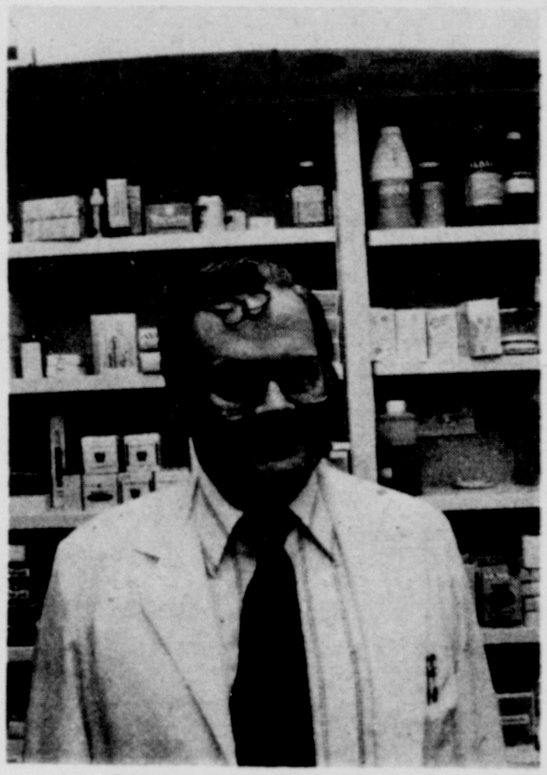
HUNDREDS IN THE SIKESTON AREA HAVE!



DAVID SHY, SHYS DRUG STORE

Wanema Townsley, manager of Cason's Pennyrich Boutique, 363 Main St., Batesville, has reported remarkable success with a high protein food, NaturSlim, which is sold by the boutique.

Mrs. Townsley, a user of NaturSlim, reported loss of 35 pounds in three months and that she has not regained the weight. She has introduced NaturSlim to hundreds of persons in the Batesville area who have reported loss of from a few pounds to 70 pounds.

Key to the NaturSlim program, Mrs. Townsley says, is use of the product, which makes a variety of Milkshakes for breakfast and lunch. This, she says, provides two high protein meals and the user is free to eat anything desired for dinner.

The weight loss program requires no exercises, no drugs or shots and best of all, brings on no hunger pangs. Mrs. Townsley, who claims to be the best ad for NaturSlim, emphasizes the general well-being, improved attitude, looks and health which result from weight loss. She also adds that NaturSlim is not an expensive product.

"The Deadly Triangle"

Dale Robinette stars, with guest stars Robert Lansing and Diana Muldaur and residents of Sun Valley, Idaho, in the NBC World Premiere movie and program development project "The Deadly Triangle," to be colorcast Thursday, May 19 (8:30-10: p.m. DST).

The drama, filmed entirely on location in Sun Valley, co-stars Tavlor Lacher, Linda Scruggs Bogart, and Geoff Lewis.

In his first weeks on the job, Stedman must find the killer of a member of a ski team training for the biathlon.

"Pine Canyon Is Burning"

Kent McCord stars as Captain William Stone, a widowered fireman with two children, in "Pine Canyon is Burning," a special 90-minute action drama to be colorcast on "NBC Double Feature Movie of the Week" Wednesday, May 18 (7-9:30 p.m. DST).

Recognizing his children's, Michael and Margaret, need to have him around more often and, much to his displeasure, their increasing dependency on their Aunt Sandra, Stone transfers to a one-man-operated fire-rescue station which permits him to stay in the field and still be home nights.

Several days later, while he is out on patrol, a fire breaks out in the canyon behind the rustic cottage which serves as the fire station and the Stone home.

"Cover Girls"

Cornelia Sharpe and Jayne Kennedy portray internationally famous fashion models who lead double lives as American espionage agents in "Cover Girls," a 90-minute adventure drama which will be telecast as the second half of an "NBC Double Feature Movie of the Week" Wednesday, May 18

Monique Lawrence anad Linda Allen, a pair of high-fashion models, combine their globe-girdling photo assignments with undercover work as United States agents. When not in front of a camera they are on the trail of Bradner, an expatriate embezzler, who is also targeted for a crime syndicate kidnapping.

"The Spirit of St. Louis" In commemoration of the date, 50 years ago, when Charles A. Lindbergh made the first solo, nonstop transatlantic flight, NBC presents the premiere of this drama. Jimmy Stewart stars as "Lucky Lindy". Though his first solo flight nearly proved to be his last, Lindbergh was soon brainstorming the country, performing with an aerial circus and carrying the air mail. But he never lost his belief in the future of air travel, and on May 2, 1927 - he set out from Roosevelt Field,Long Island, (N.Y.) on his lonely mission.

"The Deadly Triangle"

Dale Robinette stars, with guest stars Robert Lansing and Diana Muldaur and residents of Sun Valley, Idaho, in the NBC World Premiere movie and program development project "The Deadly Triangle," to be colorcast Thursday, May 19 (8:30-10: p.m. DST).

The drama, filmed entirely on location in Sun Valley, co-stars Tavlor Lacher, Linda Scruggs Bogart, and Geoff Lewis.

In his first weeks on the job, Stedman must find the killer of a member of a ski team training for the biathlon.

"Pine Canyon Is Burning"

Kent McCord stars as Captain William Stone, a widowered fireman with two children, in "Pine Canyon is Burning," a special 90-minute action drama to be colorcast on "NBC Double Feature Movie of the Week" Wednesday, May 18 (7-9:30 p.m. DST).

Recognizing his children's, Michael and Margaret, need to have him around more often and, much to his displeasure, their increasing dependency on their Aunt Sandra, Stone transfers to a one-man-operated fire-rescue station which permits him to stay in the field and still be home nights.

Several days later, while he is out on patrol, a fire breaks out in the canyon behind the rustic cottage which serves as the fire station and the Stone home.

"Cover Girls"

Cornelia Sharpe and Jayne Kennedy portray internationally famous fashion models who lead double lives as American espionage agents in "Cover Girls," a 90-minute adventure drama which will be telecast as the second half of an "NBC Double Feature Movie of the Week" Wednesday, May 18

Monique Lawrence anad Linda Allen, a pair of high-fashion models, combine their globe-girdling photo assignments with undercover work as United States agents. When not in front of a camera they are on the trail of Bradner, an expatriate embezzler, who is also targeted for a crime syndicate kidnapping.

Lucan — This program depicts the adventures of a young man who had been raised by animals in the wilderness, and who must now adapt to a civilized environment.

8:30-Good Against Evil — A young man becomes involved in the world of the occult as he searches for his fiancee who disappeared under strange circumstances on their wedding day. He soon discovers that his bride-to-be has been "possessed" since birth by a mysterious cult who is "protecting" her until she is ready to bear the child of Astoroth — the Devil.

City officials across the country are growing increasingly alarmed over the proliferation of those establishments who conduct the business of sex right out in the open. Massage parlors, X-rated movies, hard-core pornographic magazine and bookstores are sprouting like mushrooms in every major city of the country. An official from Atlanta complained that there are "nearly 100 massage parlors setting here now."

City officials are rightfully concerned, because recent history has shown that when massage parlors, or other sex-related businesses move in, the economic impact of that entire neighborhood is negative. Legitimate businesses who are in property value begins to drop, and, like a cancer, the blight begins to spread.

City officials are also rightfully concerned, because the power to do something lies in their hands. The Superme Court of the United States, has made the judgement that commercial sex is a matter of comunity standards. As recently as one month ago, the Missouri Supreme Court reaffirmed that decision, and left the matter squarely in the hands of the city government.

The actor who calls himself Harry Reems, found himself on trial in Memphis because the movie DEEP THROAT offended the community standards of Memphis. Larry Flint, publisher of HUSTLER found that he, too, could be prosecuted by a city government for violating community standards.

Nearly two years ago, I did an article on K's Body Shop, a local massage parlor. I realized then, that my magazine was pretty much a family oriented magazine, so I couched the article in carefully chosen words. For example, I indicated that "locals" were given at the massage parlor. I didn't say what a local was. It was the "local" issue which was heard by the Missouri Supreme Court a few weeks ago, when they ruled that "massage parlor girls who masturbate their customers are subject to municipal control." A "local" is a euphemism for masturbation.

The problem with allowing one massage parlor in, is that a precedince is then established. If one can survive in Sikeston for more than two years, then surely there is room for another. And so, recently, the Scorpio Massage parlor opened its door.

Sikeston then begin acquiring the dubious honor of being a "sexually liberated city." Massage parlors were allowed to operate, indeed proliferate, without obstruction. The Delta Drive In theater, though not actually in Sikeston, continues to do a booming business on the nights they show their X-rated movies at a location which is, incidentally, right across the highway from and area high school.

Merchants openly display the slick magazines of the trade. Magazines which are perhaps one eighth of a stop above hard core porn are placed on the racks next to toothpaste, batteries and candy. (Although some merchants have voluntarily placed them under a counter, and make the customer ask for them by name.)

When a hard core porn shop ran into difficulty in Cape, recently, they closed their doors under the city pressure, and moved to the city which is rapidly becoming the Sodom of Semo. Thus was born the SIKESTON BOOKORAMA.

Earlier in this article, I indicated that a city official in Atlanta was concerned because they had nearly one hundred massage parlors. That breaks down to about one massage parlor per 10,000 people. In Sikeston, we have one massage parlor per 8,000 people. Assume that half are women, that leaves 4,000 men per massage parlor. By servicing 13 men per day, those two massage parlors could match the entire male population of the city. And while the males are waiting, they could entertain themselves by reading the porn publications now offered here in the city.

If Sikeston is going to do this thing, let's do it right. Let's openly invite new sex business here. Let's open up topless and bottomless clubs and restaurants, have live sex-shows, and bill ourselves nationally as the "Sin capital of Mid-America." That way we can tax the businesses heavily, and give everyone a piece of the pie.

Or, if that doesn't appeal to you, let's go the other way. Let's call the city council members, and remind them that they have the power of the Supreme Court behind them. And let's get this sleazy part of Sikeston taken care of. Because if we don't, we could wind up like another place which started down the same trail a few years ago. A town anyone who is over 40 can remember as being an area metropolis, but is now, little more than a ghost town. Cairo, Illinois.

SIKESTON, MISSOURI KINGSWAY PLAZA

The great flood of 1937

By Robert Vaughan

On January 22, 1937, a sleet storm deposited nearly five inches of the icy mass on Sikeston's streets and sidewalks. By itself, five inches of sleet is bad enough, but this particular sleet storm came during the midst of the most devasting flood in Southeast Missouri history.

More than three thousand refugees had sought shelter in Sikeston, while Charleston took in 2500 and East Prairie almost 2,000. In all, there were 12,000 people driven out of their homes in Southeast Missouri.

The principal villain was the Ohio River, and then, after had joined, the Mississippi. The flood hit the entire Ohio-Mississippi valley, and the damage wasn't limited to Southeast Missouri. In fact, a rollcall of the flood damaged states will give some indication of the total destructiveness.

Pennsylvania had 4,000 homeless and 10 dead; West Virginia 90,000 homeless, 4 dead, Indiana 70,000 homeless, 12 dead; Ohio 250,000 homeless, 16 dead; Kentucky 250,000 homeless 261 dead; Illinois 30,000 homeless, 12 dead; Missouri 12,000 homeless, 14 dead; Tennessee 3,000 homeless 7 dead; and Arkansas 60,000 homeless with 23 dead.

The fact that there were 12,000 people driven out of their homes in Southeast Missouri is doubly significant when you consider that the larger towns of the area, Sikeston, Charleston, and East Prairie weren't counted in these totals. That means the 12,000 refugees came from the sparsely populated rural areas.

C.L. Blanton, Jr. was the WPA District Director in charge of the men engaged in levee work. Mister Blanton had a total of 4,300 men working on the levee, from Bird's Point to New Madrid. All the floodway had water, turning into an inland sea with its surface dotted with trees, ice floes, and buildings. The water had a violent current, and it swept aside anything in its path.

The U.S. Corps of Engineers dispatched a field party along the secondary or setback levee to check its elevation and note the physical characteristics of the earth to determine the effectiveness of the system. They determined that it was necessary to blast two large gaps in the Mississippi River levee on the Missouri side just south of Birds Point, if Cairo was to be saved. They used 2,000 pounds of dynamite for the job, and were successful in relieving some of the pressure on the beleagured city.

Meanwhile in the refugee centers, bitter cold weather and lack of accomodations began to cause problems. Medical aid, food and clothing were sent to this section of the state from St. Louis. The State Medical Director along with four doctors and five nurses went to Charleston where many of the refugees were suffering from exposure. There was also a Typhoid Fever scare, though fortunately, it didn't develop.

In Sikeston camps were established throughout the city. The South Grade School buildings were pressed into service, as were the High School, Baptist Church, Nazarene Church, Christian Church and Odd Fellows buildings. The Methodist Church served as an emergency hospital where three babies were born duringthe

By Robert Vaughan

On January 22, 1937, a sleet storm deposited nearly five inches of the icy mass on Sikeston's streets and sidewalks. By itself, five inches of sleet is bad enough, but this particular sleet storm came during the midst of the most devasting flood in Southeast Missouri history.

More than three thousand refugees had sought shelter in Sikeston, while Charleston took in 2500 and East Prairie almost 2,000. In all, there were 12,000 people driven out of their homes in Southeast Missouri.

The principal villain was the Ohio River, and then, after had joined, the Mississippi. The flood hit the entire Ohio-Mississippi valley, and the damage wasn't limited to Southeast Missouri. In fact, a rollcall of the flood damaged states will give some indication of the total destructiveness.

Pennsylvania had 4,000 homeless and 10 dead; West Virginia 90,000 homeless, 4 dead, Indiana 70,000 homeless, 12 dead; Ohio 250,000 homeless, 16 dead; Kentucky 250,000 homeless 261 dead; Illinois 30,000 homeless, 12 dead; Missouri 12,000 homeless, 14 dead; Tennessee 3,000 homeless 7 dead; and Arkansas 60,000 homeless with 23 dead.

The fact that there were 12,000 people driven out of their homes in Southeast Missouri is doubly significant when you consider that the larger towns of the area, Sikeston, Charleston, and East Prairie weren't counted in these totals. That means the 12,000 refugees came from the sparsely populated rural areas.

C.L. Blanton, Jr. was the WPA District Director in charge of the men engaged in levee work. Mister Blanton had a total of 4,300 men working on the levee, from Bird's Point to New Madrid. All the floodway had water, turning into an inland sea with its surface dotted with trees, ice floes, and buildings. The water had a violent current, and it swept aside anything in its path.

The U.S. Corps of Engineers dispatched a field party along the secondary or setback levee to check its elevation and note the physical characteristics of the earth to determine the effectiveness of the system. They determined that it was necessary to blast two large gaps in the Mississippi River levee on the Missouri side just south of Birds Point, if Cairo was to be saved. They used 2,000 pounds of dynamite for the job, and were successful in relieving some of the pressure on the beleagured city.

Meanwhile in the refugee centers, bitter cold weather and lack of accomodations began to cause problems. Medical aid, food and clothing were sent to this section of the state from St. Louis. The State Medical Director along with four doctors and five nurses went to Charleston where many of the refugees were suffering from exposure. There was also a Typhoid Fever scare, though fortunately, it didn't develop.

In Sikeston camps were established throughout the city. The South Grade School buildings were pressed into service, as were the High School, Baptist Church, Nazarene Church, Christian Church and Odd Fellows buildings. The Methodist Church served as an emergency hospital where three babies were born duringthe

Dr. Tom Pinkstaff

Ron Steinmetz

Last week we took a look at drug abuse in general. Now we are going to get specific with it. In order to get some measure of the problem as it relates to Sikeston, I interviewed Dr. Tom Pinkstaff, a well-known and respected local pediatrician, and Ron Steinmetz, a psychiatric counselor with the Tri-County Health service center, here in Sikeston.

DELTA: Dr. Pinkstaff, when would you first run across a drug related problem. Only when there is an overdose?

DR. PINKSTAFF: Almost always when there is an overdose. Once in a while I will be referred a young person by their parents or sometimes by the young person themselves when they are concerned about their use of drugs.

DELTA: You mean sometimes a young person will approach you and tell you he is hooked and he wants to get off?

DELTA: What kind of drugs are we talking about, here in Sikeston?

DR. PINKSTAFF: A few years ago it wan cocaine, some hallucegens, though not many. But recently the overdosage has been coming from the variety of unknown pills these kids buy. And that's the funny part. These kids will go out and pay a dollar apiece for these things, and they take a thing they call a vegetable garden, or vegetable salad, I forget what they call it. Anyway it means that they just buy pills, and they have no idea at all of what they are taking.

DELTA: What are they after?

DR. PINKSTAFF: They are after a high, but they have no idea of what they are getting. I recently had a girl who took something called purple microdots. It was an hallucegen of some kind, perhaps peyote. She was way out of it for about two or three days.

DELTA: Have you been able to identify any of these unknown pills they've been taking? Like after the effect?

DR. PINKSTAFF: No.

DELTA: What kind of reaction are they getting from them?

DR. PINKSTAFF: They are getting extreme central nervous system depression. These kids come in and they go into coma. This makes it very tough, because you have no idea what they are tkaing. it is probably a barbituate becvause they are the most common thing that will put them into a coma. But you can't be sure. You can get some bloodstream and urine samples, but it's really tough to see what it is. So far there is no other way to treat them than to give them supportive care, and follow their cardiac rate and if they go into deep coma they have to be put on a respirator. We've had a few who have had to be put on the respirator so they could breathe until they got it out of their systems.

DELTA: Do the kids have regular suppliers of the stuff? Do people come on the school grounds and sell drugs to them?

DR. PINKSTAFF: You get very little infomation from the kids. And of course when the problem is acute, we don't push for it. Our primary concern is to get the kids well. My source of information is limited. Also, I don't push it, because I don't want to lose what sense of rapport I have in treating them. I have good success on those who will come voluntarily. those who are sent by their parents, success is nto as good. And those who come into the hospital on overdoses, the success is not as good as you would think. You'd thing that spending the night in intensive care would scare them to death, but it doesn't seem to rattle their cage that much.

DELTA: Have you had repeat OD's?

DR. PINKSTAFF: Yes, we've had repeat OD's.

DELTA: Do we have a heroin problem at all?

DR. PINKSTAF: Not among the kids I see. What heroin I see is int he emergency room, generally among older people, many of whom are just passing through.

DELTA: What are the ages of the kids you see?

DR. PINKSTAFF: Unfortunately it has dropped. I'm sure the highschool has a high percentage, but we've had more 13-14-15 year olds in the last year than we've ever had.

DELTA: What is the answer to the problem?

DR. PINKSTAFF: The main answer to the problem, I think, would be the peer group at the high school. They had this three or four years ago and that squelched it down pretty good. The kids at highschool took it on themselves to make statements regarding how silly it was to use drugs. Then the situation calmed down because it wasn't the right thing to do, it wasn't the in-thing.

DELTA: You mean an active highschool program could clear this up?.

DR. PINKSTAFF: I think so. The credibility has to come from the youth. Because that's where the credibility lies with those who use it.

DELTA: What should parents lood for, to determine whether or not their child has this problem?

DR. PINKSTAFF: They need to watch for changes in the schedule behavior, resting pattern, activity, or a change in friends. And it's interesting, they go into a social shell and they will associate only with the gorup that will accept them. This is why many of them want to get out of it. They've dug themselves a hole.

DELTA: What should the parents do then?

DR. PINKSTAFF: They should get the young people to go somewhere to talk to omeone who would relate to them. A doctor, a minister, a close friend, or what have you. If they can get the young person to talk about their problem, it is easier to get counseling along other lines.

One of the places young people go when they get themselves in the drug quagmire is the Tri-County Mental Health service center. The man they see most often there is Ed McGuire, but Mr. McGuire was unable to grand us an interview because he was suffering from back trouble. So, Rn Steinmetz was kind enough to talk to me.

DELTA: When a kid comes to you, what do you do?

MR. STEINMETZ: It depends on what stage he's in. We need to determine whether they are experimenting, or whether they are using it on the weekends for a high, or whether they are really depending on it. Then it gets to be a real proble.

DELTA: What kind of background do the kids have?

MR. STEINMETZ: Frequently they are form homes where drugs are being taken as a matter of routine by other family members. Tranquilizers for the moms, some type of upper for the fathers, maybe an older sister who just had a baby and is taking pills to cope with the emotional stresses following birth. It's a natural step then for the kids to take some of the medicine they find right there in the medicine cabinet, without regard as to what it is or what it will do.

DELTA: They've got those caps on medicine now for little kids, but what you are saying is the big kids need to be watched just as much.

MR. STEINMETZ: Yes. The parents should exercise some control over these psychological type medicines. Maybe keep an accurate count on the number of pills around the hosue, or something like that.

DELTA; Why do the kids take the drugs? Especially a downer, there's no high from them.

MR. STEINMETZ: You hear the word hassel a lot. They take them because they thing that through the drugs they can achieve some peace of mind. They can get away form any pressure around them, perhaps arguments in the family, that sort of thing.

DELTA: A lot of people use that same excuse to take a drink.

MR. STEINMETZ. Alcohol is a drug, and is one of our major problems with the kids. In fact, I would like you to state that. Right now, for example, a big thing with the kids is scotch and milk in their lockers.

DELTA: What do you feel in the answer to this problem?

MR. STEINMETZ: I think the problem will only be solved when the kids realize what they are getting into. And they've got to get that from a source they can relate to. And that means other kids. We've got some programs underway to combat this problem, but the final solution is going to have to rest with the kids themselves. They are going to have to look around them, and realize where they are going and what they are doing. And then they've got to help the others who can't see as clearly as they can.

The American Red cross supplied food and the National Guard set up a kitchen in a building at the rear of the Odd Fellows building. Refugees were fed twice a day, breakfast at nine in the morning, usually oatmeal, milk and coffee, and dinner at four o'clock in the afternoon, usually a stew. In addition to maintaining a kitchen, Company K of the 140th infantry the unit from Sikeston, was mobilized for duty in the flood areas. The company was first sent to Cairo where they stood guard during the dynamiting of the levee at Bird's Point, then returned to Sikeston where they took up duty at the refugee camps, maintaining order and aiding in the refugee work.

One of the side effects of the flood was the inability to get messages in and out of the Southeast Missouri area. Mail service was disrupted, and many telephone lines were out. That caused a rush on the local office of the Western Union Telegraph office, with more than one thousand messages passing through in one day. Most of the messages were either assurances of safety, or expressions of concern over safety so that the system became completely bogged down. For several days it was impossible for private citizens to send any messages at all, and many who were anxious about getting word in or out turned to amateur station operators for assistance.

One such station was operated by George Plattenburg of Sikeston. Mr. Plattenburg maintained connections with airplanes making surveys of the flooded areas in search of stranded persons, and with the State Highway Department in coordinating the evacuation operation.

The airplanes which searched for flood victims were part of the squadron of Army and National Guard planeswhich made Sikeston their base of operation. 114 soldiers, including Major General Stanley H. Ford, Commanding General of the entire Army Area, arrived in Sikeston to conduct flood rescue operations. One of the planes brought Governor Lloyd C. Stark to Sikeston for a personal visit to the flooded area.

The late Clint H. Denman, long time publisher of the SIKESTON HERALD, visited the Sikeston Rescue Camps, and came away with a series of impressions and quotations which provide the color and tone of the day. Here, as first appeared in the HERALD on January 28, 1937, are some of Mr. Denman's observations:

Said one 77 year-old woman from below New Madrid, "I'm going back to New Madrid, yea I am, can't stand the grub they hand out to me here, don't like it at all: I'll take the river every time before I take this grub."

"Forty-seven people walked with me over the ice at midnight Sunday to get to the motor boat which took us to New Madrid" said one woman in one of the refugee camps in Sikeston. "We walked 3 miles over the ice and were afraid to carry any of our belongings for fear we would break through the ice."

"If only they would try to get our stock out," was heard from more than one farmer of the lowland districts. "When we left we saw them standing froze in water half way up their legs.

"God bless them CCC boys," said several refugees. "If they hadn't come along, Lord knows where we'd be now."

"Why I seen them trying to use a crawler tractor to get the ice from some of my stock," said another refugee," and they couldn't budge it." "Yes, we got plenty of feed, but how can you feed stock frozen in ice? Another thing, how can you get to the feed when there's water all around it?"

Speaking of his landlord, one refugee said:

"Yes sirree, that man's got $10,000 worth of as good corn as you ever saw, just a swimmin' around the water down there. But," he added.

"he can afford to lose it better than we can one little pig."

"I walked in water over my knees to get to the boat," said refugee from new Madrid, "and I broke ice every step of the way before I could walk at all."

Another refugee said, "Do you think they will get our stock out? It's all we got to live by." And when asked how much stock they had the woman of the family replied, "Just two mules and one cow, but it's our all."

One tenant farmer said:

"Yes sir, my landlord said I better get out and get out quick, and that's what I'm going to do. He's just that good a man you know." Another refugee said, "Do you know it made my landlord kinda mad to see me and my family leaving, it actually did, said that water wouldn't do us any harm; wonder what he's thinking now?"

"My baby is nine days old," said one woman, "and Sunday night they took me and the baby on a sled and we traveled for three miles over the ice before we got to the CCC truck waiting for us. Yes, three girls are mine too; what we'll do now, me and my husband, I don't know. We've got nothing."

In taking refugees from the Como district, 6 miles west of Portageville, Sunday night, one of the number, an expectant mother, fell from the truck. Early Monday morning she gave birth to a child in the courthouse at New Madrid where all were taken. On Monday all those refugees were brought to Sikeston.

"We were just setting down to dinner last Saturday," said another refugee farmer," when they knocked on the door and said we'd have to get out in a hurry. As we walked over the ice to the truck we saw two mules that had been hurt by the ice and fallen in the deep water below and drowned."

More than 870 refugees were housed in the South Grade School.

Most of the families in the refugee camps have from one to ten children, with the larger number prevailing.

How we would have gotten out without the boats and the CCC boys we just don't know," said several refugees. "Now if they can only bring our stock out, things won't be so terrible."

Another woman refugee, when asked how many members there were in her family said, "Just me and my husband, but he's down in the water I guess; anyway he's old enough to root for hisself."

"I just can't get him to lay down and go to sleep: He thinks it's still daylight," said one mother at 10 o'clock Monday night, when her 12-year old boy refused to go to sleep." You know he ain't never seen these kind of lights before," she said, referring to the electric lights in the room.

One woman carrying a three month's old infant, waded water above her knees to get to the rescue truck, said "I thought several times I couldn't make it, but for the baby's sake I kept on going."

A refugee farmer from south of New Madrid who had rescued his wife and three children, mourned the fact that his two mules, his one mare and a cow and a claf while safe on a small dry spot when he left last Saturday, were either drowned or starved to death now. Another share-cropper form the JY pocket south of Portageville declared that he was "kinda sick of tha there place, and would like to get about 30 acres of ground around these here parts to farm." Said he, "If I could get that 30 acres, I just wouldn't go back to that JY."

Early Monday morning she gave birth to a child in the courthouse at New Madrid where all were taken. On Monday all those refugees were brought to Sikeston.

"We were just setting down to dinner last Saturday," said another refugee farmer," when they knocked on the door and said we'd have to get out in a hurry. As we walked over the ice to the truck we saw two mules that had been hurt by the ice and fallen in the deep water below and drowned."

Another farmer attempting to scaffold his corn dropped one of the boards in his hurry to evacuate and killed his largestand finest hog.

"Got the morning paper here," said one of the women refugees." You know we like to keep up with the flood news."

More than 870 refugees were housed in the South Grade School.

Most of the families in the refugee camps have from one to ten children, with the larger number prevailing.

How we would have gotten out without the boats and the CCC boys we just don't know," said several refugees. "Now if they can only bring our stock out, things won't be so terrible."

Another woman refugee, when asked how many members there were in her family said, "Just me and my husband, but he's down in the water I guess; anyway he's old enough to root for hisself."

"I just can't get him to lay down and go to sleep: He thinks it's still daylight," said one mother at 10 o'clock Monday night, when her 12-year old boy refused to go to sleep." You know he ain't never seen these kind of lights before," she said, referring to the electric lights in the room.

One woman carrying a three month's old infant, waded water above her knees to get to the rescue truck, said "I thought several times I couldn't make it, but for the baby's sake I kept on going."

A refugee farmer from south of New Madrid who had rescued his wife and three children, mourned the fact that his two mules, his one mare and a cow and a claf while safe on a small dry spot when he left last Saturday, were either drowned or starved to death now. Another share-cropper form the JY pocket south of Portageville declared that he was "kinda sick of tha there place, and would like to get about 30 acres of ground around these here parts to farm." Said he, "If I could get that 30 acres, I just wouldn't go back to that JY."

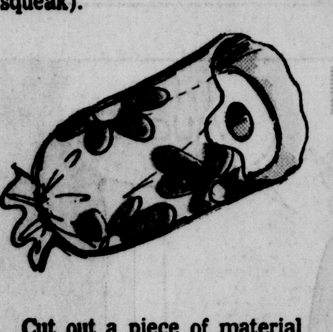
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an idea for making a neckroll pillow. The cost is about 40 cents and a piece of old sheet or any other scrap of soft material.

Buy one roll of paper towels in the jumbo size. Remove cellophane (so pillow won't squeak).



Cut out a piece of material approximately 18 inches by 18 inches. Stitch one side to make a tube .

Insert the paper towel roll and gather each end of the tube and fasten tight with rubber bands. Ruffles may be added at each end.

R. Albietz

Thank you for such a smart hint. You're a real smarty.

Heloise

ALL HOOKED UP!

DEAR HELOISE:

Allow me to give you my idea. Cut the neck from a detergent bottle on which there is no raised printing. Add one-half to three-fourths of a cup of sand or pebbles for weight. Weighting is important.

Insert 14 pin-on drapery hooks in three staggered rows around three sides of the bottle. Add a colorful bouquet of tiny plastic flowers in the neck.

You have a pretty and practical ring holder and other small jewelry "organizer."

The larger bottles can also be used with a hole made in the back to hang it on the wall for necklaces and chains.

Mabel F. Walker

MIGHTY FUNNY

DEAR HELOISE:

I save the cardboard tubes after I use up the paper towels, wax paper or foil. The long boxes from these can be used for the same purpose. I also save the Sunday comics, dot games or a child's section.

I roll them, insert in cardboard tubes, and post to grandchildren who love to receive mail throughout the year.

H.S.S. Bustleton

BABY'S SOCKS

DEAR HELOISE:

I would like to offer what I believe is a most useful suggestion for a new and busy mother. Being one myself, I was always misplacing or losing my daughter's tiny socks, and the drawer they were kept in was always a mess.

I discovered that an egg carton was a perfect nesting place for those tiny socks. Each pair has its own slot and now I can easily and quickly choose the color and type I want.

To make the carton somewhat more decorative, I cover it with the same pattern that I line the drawers with.

K. Finnerty

"PLEASE MAIL ME"

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a helpful hint to young people whose mother always forgets to mail their letters to faraway friends.

I write lots of letters but Mom doesn't always see them and forgets to mail them when she goes out.

I cut the top off a tall tissue box and set this on my desk.

Each day before Mom goes out she checks my box to see if I have any letters to be mailed.

When I receive mail she just pops them in my box where I can find them after school.

KNIT ONE, PURL TWO

DEAR HELOISE:

I thought I might share this hint with you.

My mother does a lot of knitting. On occasion, she has to wind two separate balls of yarn into one. I noticed that the balls were "wandering" around the room.

I hit upon this idea of putting the two balls into two separate bowls.

This makes winding yarn much easier and no more chasing!

Janet

IT'S SO SAFE!

DEAR HELOISE:

My hint is for mothers who like to sew and have little ones toddling around the sewing machine.

The seat of the chair makes an excellent temporary bin for your patterns and material while you are sewing.

Mrs. A. Hughes

ONE, TWO, TREE

DEAR HELOISE:

In our city, and I presume the same is true in many other cities, teenagers like to "decorate" trees.

To the despair of the occupants, the trees in their front yards have toilet paper all up and around them.

At first glance, it would seem next to impossible to get that paper out of the trees, but the solution is simple. Adjust your hose nozzle to its strongest stream and aim it at the paper which will readily dissolve and fall into the yard where it can easily be raked up.

Eugene P. Aldredge

WHAT A YARN!

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's an idea for any mother or baby-sitter with preschoolers or young children:

Save those colorful plastic foam trays that meat and fruit are sometimes packaged in. They come in beautiful pastel colors of green, pink or blue.

Claire Serice

CROSSED COOKIES

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a slight change in an old favorite, which I found good.

When making the crisscross on peanut butter cookies, dip the fork in cinnamon-sugar, instead of plain sugar.

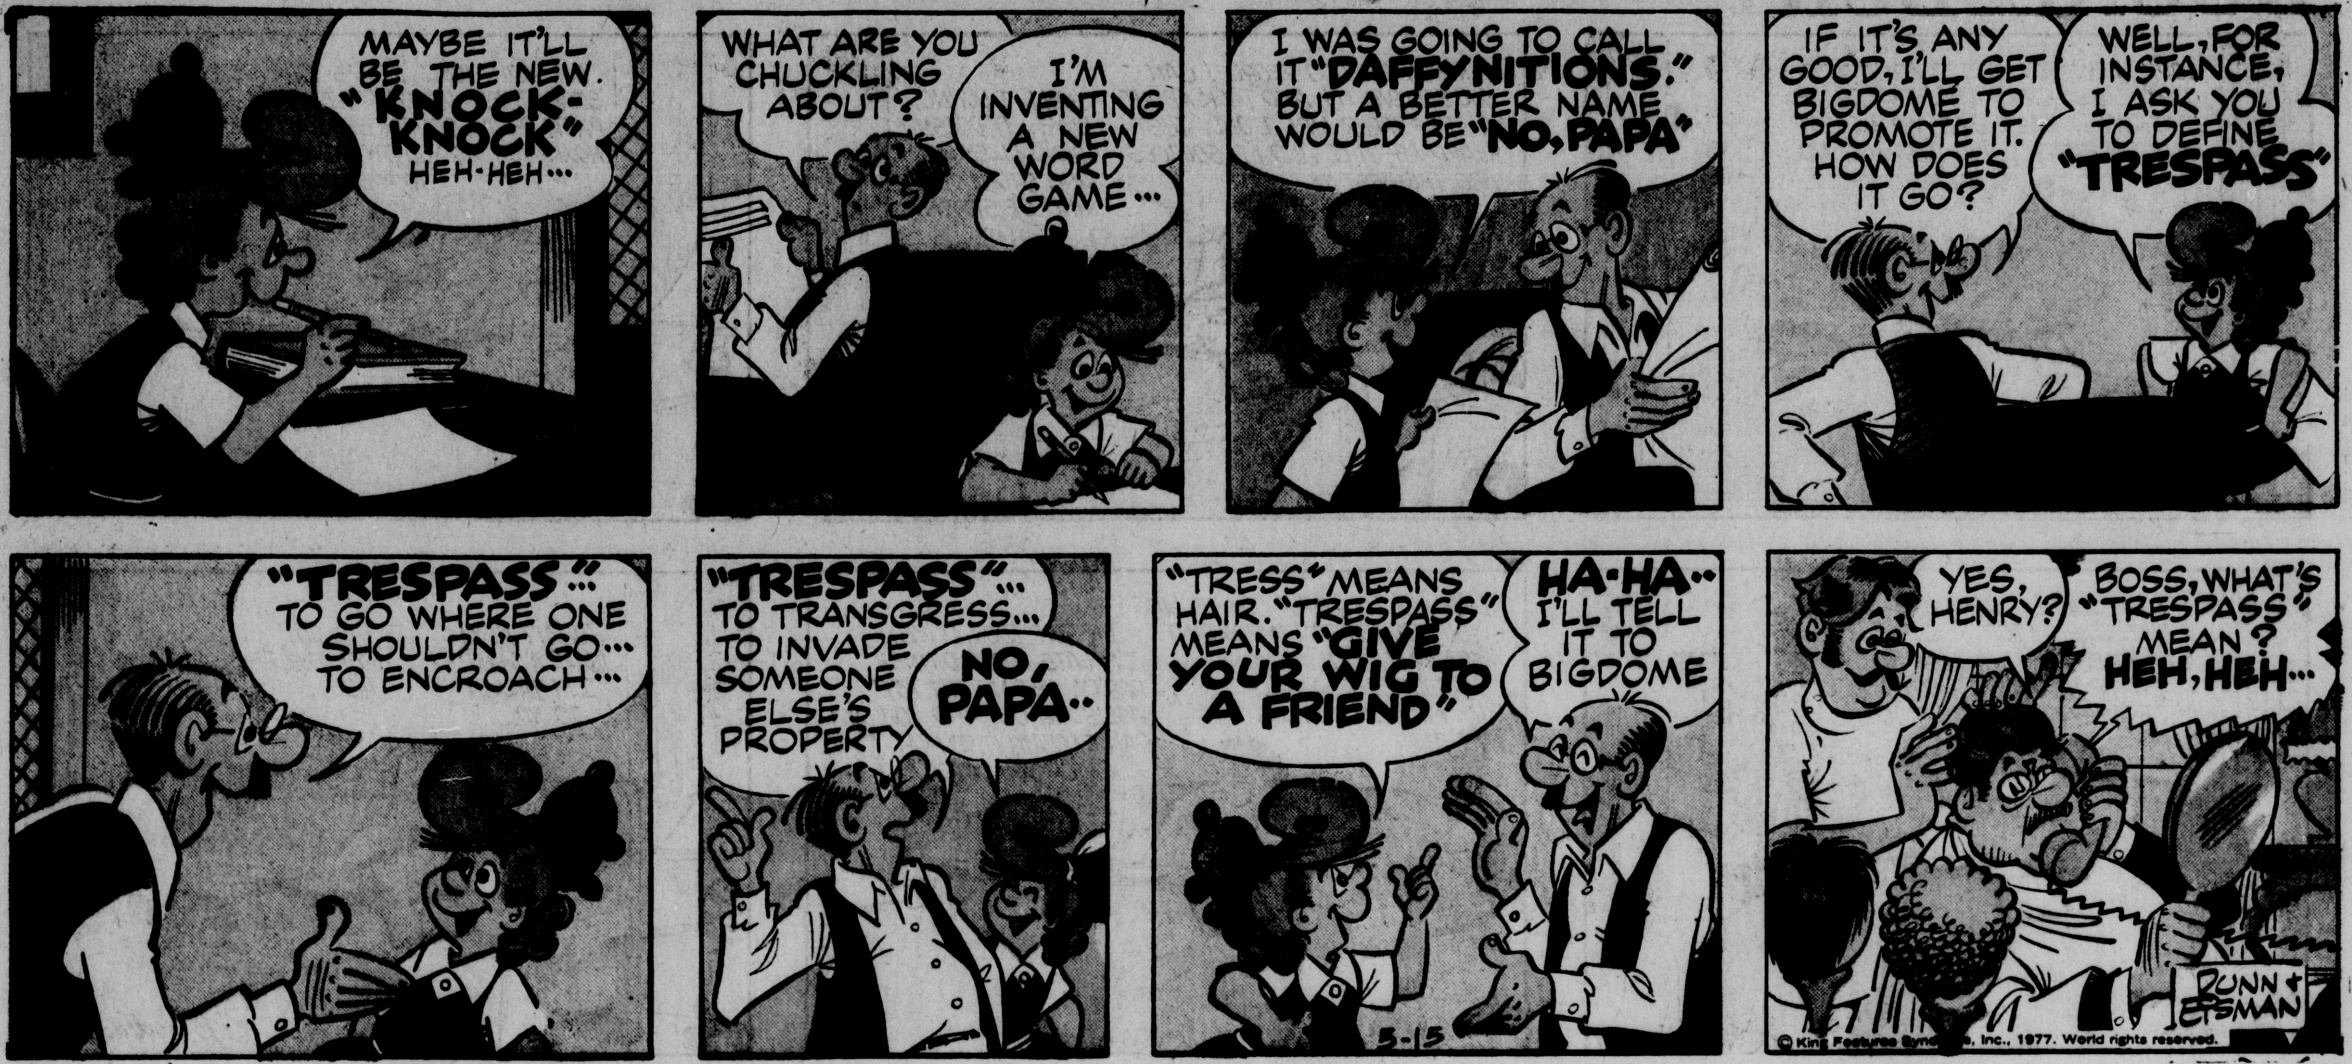
LITTLE IODINE



MAYBE IT'LL BE THE NEW "KNOCK-KNOCK" HEH-HEH...
WHAT ARE YOU CHUCKLING ABOUT?
I'M INVENTING A NEW WORD GAME...
I WAS GOING TO CALL IT "DAFFYNITIONS." BUT A BETTER NAME WOULD BE "NO, PAPA"
IF IT'S ANY GOOD, I'LL GET BIGDOME TO PROMOTE IT. HOW DOES IT GO?
WELL, FOR INSTANCE, I ASK YOU TO DEFINE "TRESPASS"
"TRESPASS"... TO TRANSGRESS... TO INVADE SOMEONE ELSE'S PROPERTY
"TRESS" MEANS HAIR. "TRESPASS" MEANS "GIVE YOUR WIG TO A FRIEND"
HA-HA.. I'LL TELL IT TO BIGDOME
5-15
YES, HENRY?

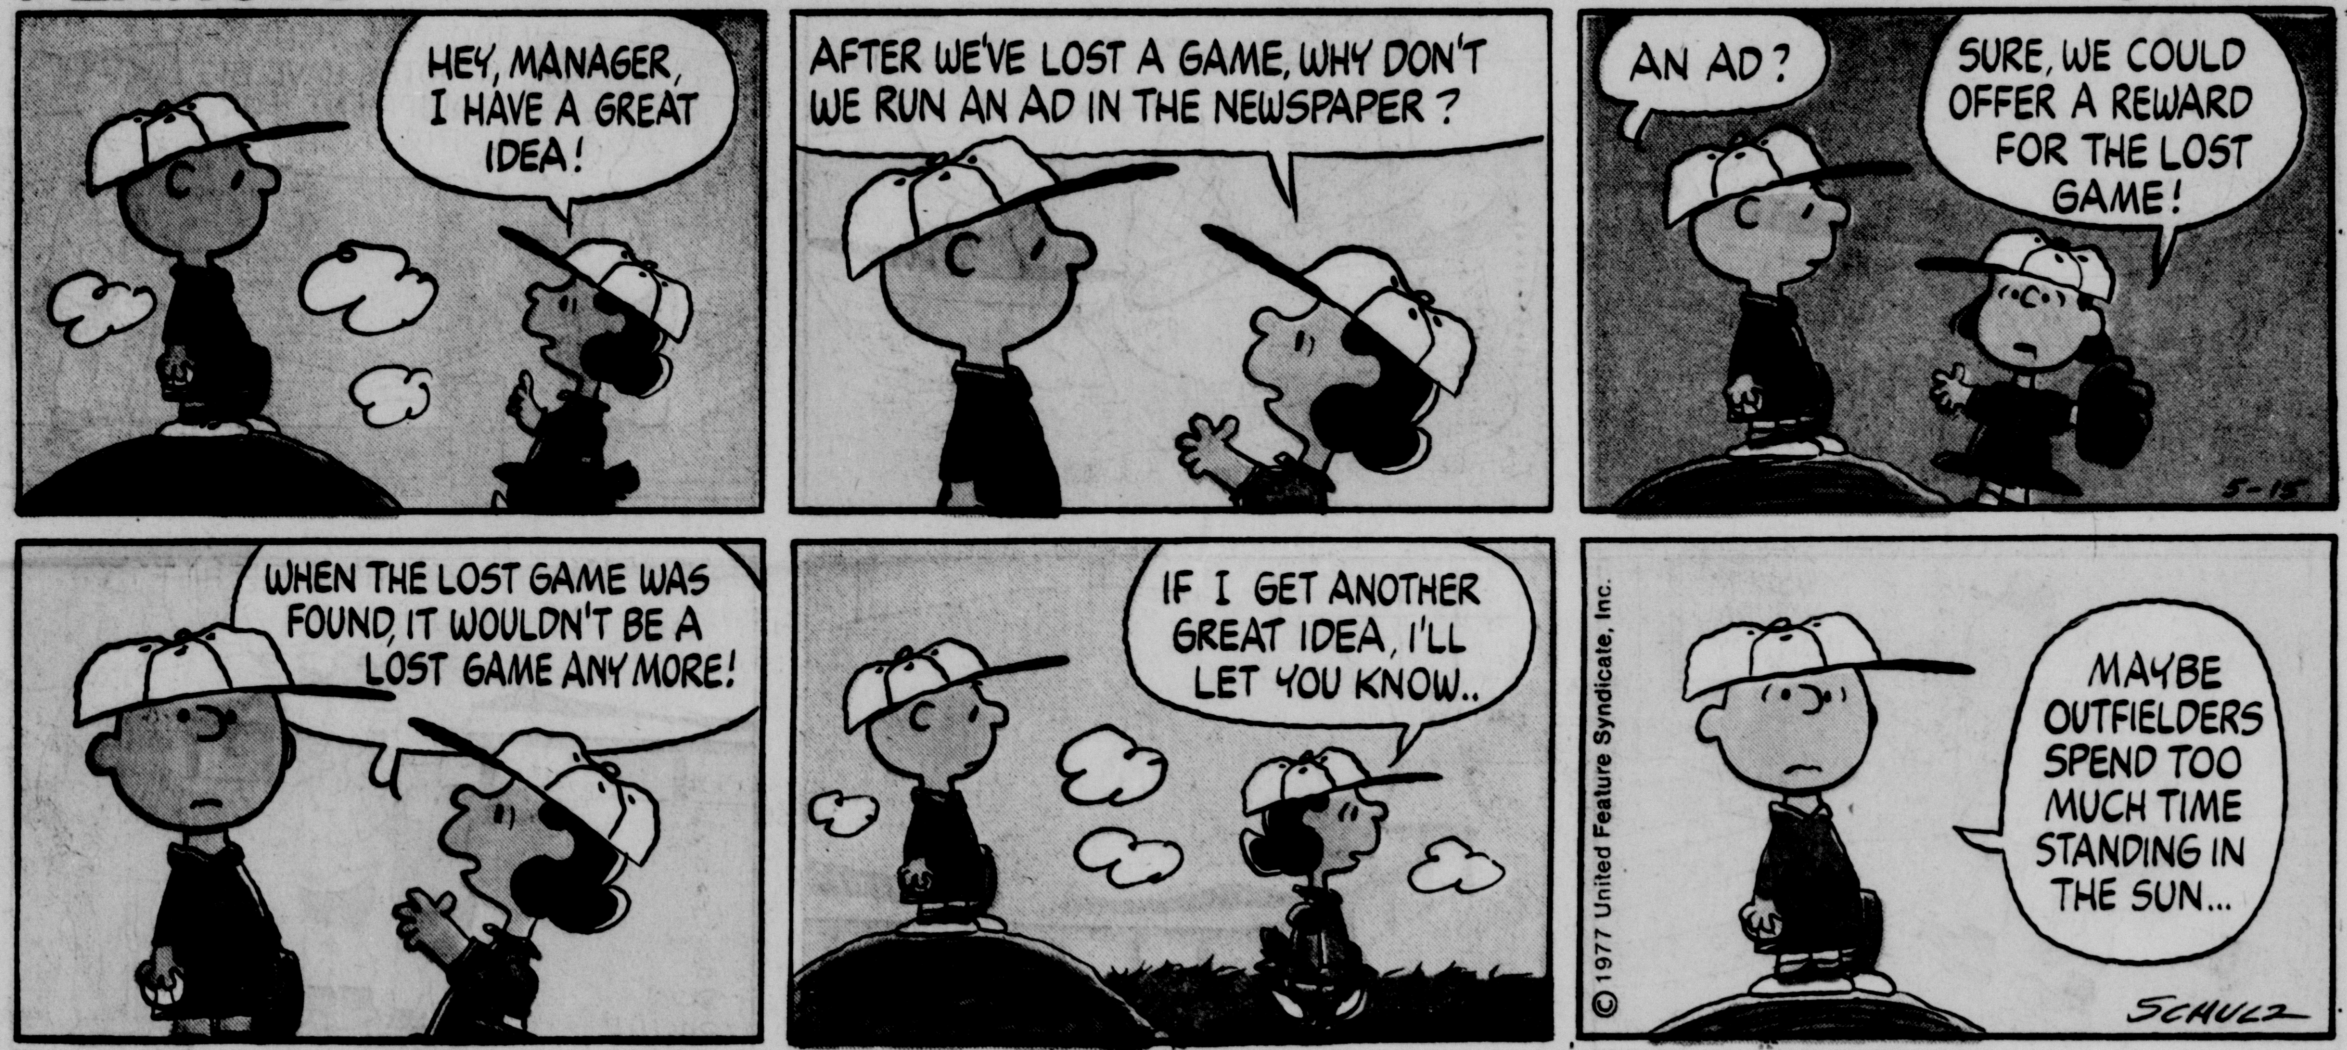
PEANUTS®

By Schulz



HEY, MANAGER, I HAVE A GREAT IDEA!
AFTER WE'VE LOST A GAME, WHY DON'T WE RUN AN AD IN THE NEWSPAPER?
AN AD?
SURE, WE COULD OFFER A REWARD FOR THE LOST GAME!
5-15
WHEN THE LOST GAME WAS FOUND, IT WOULDN'T BE A LOST GAME ANY MORE!
IF I GET ANOTHER GREAT IDEA, I'LL LET YOU KNOW..
MAYBE OUTFIELDERS SPEND TOO MUCH TIME STANDING IN THE SUN...

LOOK, YAWN, YOU HAVE TO ADMIT IT'S ONE HELLUVA STORY IDEA! THAT QUAKE LAST AUGUST WAS THE SECOND BIGGEST KILLER IN HISTORY, AND VIRTUALLY NO ONE KNOWS ABOUT IT!
I MEAN, 655,000 PEOPLE! CAN YOU BELIEVE IT! AND TALK ABOUT A STIFF UPPER LIP! I ONLY JUST HEARD ABOUT IT, AND MY SOURCES ARE THE BEST IN PEKING!
WELL, I DUNNO, DUKE.. IT DOESN'T SOUND LIKE "ROLLING STONE'S" KIND OF STORY..
OH, YEAH? WELL, WHAT'S YOUR IDEA OF A STORY THESE DAYS? DRIVEL FROM JOHN DEAN? PHOTO ESSAYS OF PRINCESS CAROLINE? AND HOW MUCH DID YOU PAY JOHN BELUSHI TO PRETEND HE'S ME?!
LOOK, DUKE! I DON'T HIRE NAMES! I HIRE TALENT! TOP TALENT! THE KIND OF TALENT YOU ONCE HAD BEFORE IT EVAPORATED ALONG WITH YOUR BRAINS FIVE YEARS AGO!

LOOK, YOU LITTLE PUP, I'M TELLING YOU, THIS IS AN IMPORTANT STORY! WE'RE TALKING ABOUT OVER A HALF MILLION LITTLE...
UH-HUH. LOOK, DUKE, I'M LATE FOR A DINNER PARTY. LET ME PUT MY ASSISTANT ON, AND YOU CAN EXPLAIN IT TO HIM. CATCH YOU LATER.
HELLO? JACK FORD HERE.

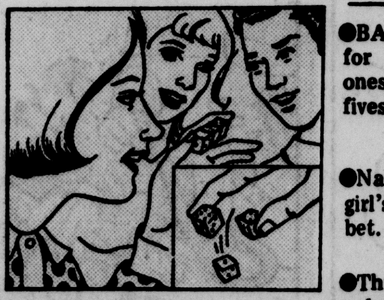
HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Dress is shorter. 2. Guitar is different. 3. Foot is repositioned. 4. Hat is missing. 5. Purse is missing. 6. Baby's rattle is missing.

Hal Kaufman's JUNIOR WHIRL®



THIS TRICK looks easy, and it is when one knows the secret—and has had a bit of practice. The trickster places three dice on the table side by side. He or she then challenges a bystander to pick up the threesome between the thumb and forefinger (as above), and at a signal to cause the center die to fall (see inset).

How it's done: As the dice are picked up, pressure is exerted on the outer two, causing them to stick to the fingers momentarily when the fingers are separated to allow the center die to fall, and long enough to snap the two dice together.

BULLETIN BOARD

●BANK NOTE! A bank customer, seeking change for a current U.S. bill, requested: ". . .Some ones, twice as many twos, three times as many fives as twos, and three tens." What bill?

A one-hundred dollar bill, for which he got two ones, four twos, twelve fives and three tens.

●Name Game! Challenge: Form, if you can, a girl's name with just two letters of the alphabet. Then, likewise, form a boy's name.

●Thumb Tester! Place four small coins in the palm of your hand. Use your thumb to move them, one at a time, to the tips of your fingers.

●Riddle-Me-This! What rule applies to serving ice cream? Softy first. What happened to the surplus citrus crop? It was elemonaded.
